Social Security tax hike wins House approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation that would put an unprecedented tax bite on the 104 million Americans who have Social Security taxes withheld from their pay checks is heading to the Senate after winning House approval.

A Senate vote on a similar bill could come as early as next week.

On Thursday, the House passed, 275 to 146, its version of legislation increasing the tax for every worker covered by the program, with the heaviest impact falling on upper-income workers. Their employers would also pay more under the House bill.

A decade from now, anyone earning $42,600 would pay over three times as much Social Security tax as is now withheld. The tax would go from $965 this year to $3,025 in 1987.

Someone earning $20,000 would pay $1,420, instead of $965. A worker with a salary of $10,000 would pay $710, up from $585.

Congress will probably enact hefty tax increases this year to keep the Social Security system from going broke. The system has amassed $5.6 billion in deficits since 1975.

Because of population age shifts and such other factors as high unemployment, less money is being taken in by Social Security than it is paying out in benefits.

"We are concerned about keeping the system solvent and this bill will do it," Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., said after the House approved the bill produced by the ways and means committee, which he heads.

Although some members complained about the major tax increase, most agreed that the financial crisis was severe enough to merit the drastic steps.

However, the House added two amendments that increased the tax rate beyond what the committee called for.

One amendment would remove limits on wages earned by Social Security recipients, phasing out the current maximum of $3,000 on outside earnings by 1982.

Under current law, recipients lose $1 in benefits for every $2 they take in above that amount.

Elderly persons could therefore continue to receive a full salary while drawing full Social Security benefits.

The second amendment, approved earlier, continues an exemption for more than 6 million public employes and congressmen, who have separate retirement plans.

The House did not consider any change in the benefits Social Security pays to 33 million people akreadt receiving benefits.

The House-approved bill would also allow recipients to continue receiving benefits even after marrying. Some elderly couples now live together without marrying because they would otherwise lose benefits.

Under the pending Senate bill, employers would for the first time pay more than their employes.

The Social Security tax is now 5.85 per cent of wages, with workers earning $16,500 paying the maximum of $965.

Power plant will effect housing and city budget

The influx of employes needed to build the 235-megawatt power plant for Sikeston will have an impact not only on the city's economy, but also on the city's budget, City Manager Charles Church told the Sikeston Area Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

The chamber met for a noon luncheon at Patti Todd's Supper Club.

A study done by the power plant project engingeers, Phelps & Hogland, shows the influx of workers will not have as great an effect on housing as orginally expected, Church said.

The study shows about 20 per cent of the workers, or 75 families, will need trailers, and 30 per cent or 112 workers, will room in Sikeston on weekdays and commute to their homes on weekends.

Of the remaining 50 per cent, 20 per cent will be roomers 10 per cent will rent homes and 20 per cent will commute to the city.

Higher rents and land values will come with the increasing number of workers.

Church said the City Council will be under considerable pressure to amend city codes to allow for more development of apartment complexes and trailer parks.

If the city is not careful, the entire character of Sikeston could change, Church said.

If developers cannot have their way inside the city, they may move outside the city limits. That will require the implementation of county planning and zoning for land near Sikeston, Church said.

Other public organizations such as the schools and medical facilities will have considerable pressure put on them, Church added.

The Public Safety Department will also be under . strain, he remarked. The city has reduced the number of officers by four in order to balance the budget and it is difficult even now for the department to keep up with the work load, he added.

Church said studies have shown that a growth rate of 10 per cent over several years results in degradation of enviornment.

The long-range benefits to the city from the power plant are tremendous, Church said, but the city needs to anticipate the problems in order to handle them.

Church said one of the problems with the influx of new workers is that they will be using city services without paying city taxes.

In response to a question, Church said that a one per cent sales tax would offset some of the impact and enable those workers to share some of the costs.

Ken Williams a representative of the Sikeston Production Credit Association, reminded chamber members of the Farmers Appreciation Banquet at 6:30 p.m. Nov. 17 in the National Guard Armory.

Sixteen farm families from Scott, Stoddard, Mississippi and New Madrid counties, will be honored at the banquet.

Bill Wellborn, executive vice president of the chamber, said that 33 new members have joined the chamber so far this nomth. He said he expects to see a total of 50 by the time the membership

Embargo against South Africa given U.S., European support

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States and its Western allies on the U.N. Security Council have agreed to back an arms embargo against South Africa, but some Third World countries say they want tougher action.

African delegates are unhappy with the Western proposal because it provides only for a six-month embargo, which could be renewed, and because it includes no economic restrictions.

The Africans were trying to decide today whether to back the plan anyway or to press for changes. Any such sanctions against South Africa must be approved by the Security Council where a vote is not expected until Saturday or Monday.

President Carter said Thursday the United States would support a mandatory embargo on arms sales to South Africa's white minority government to demonstrate displeasure with its policies of racial segregation.

A mandatory embargo, if approved by the Security Council, would be binding on United Nations members.

In South Africa, Foreign Minister Roelof Botha accused the United States of being unfair and urged American leaders to reconsider their policy.

"It is quite obvious that we are being singled out for special treatment, not because of the reasons mentioned by the president but because of the demands of a number of countries who have actively conducted a vendetta against us for some years now," Botha said.

"If the maintenance of human rights was indeed the concern of the American government, then certainly America should be pressing for sanctions against more than half of the governments of the nations of the world," he added.

Defense Minister Pieter Botha acknowledged that American support of the U.N. resolution would affect his country, but said: "We will survive President Carter."

The United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Canada, the Western nations on the Security Council, reached final agreement on a joint embargo proposal Thursday.

The United States has been abiding by a voluntary arms embargo decreed by the United Nations in 1963, but the Western powers vetoed a Security Council proposal for a binding embargo in 1975.

Black African states have been calling for tougher international sanctions against South Africa for 14 years. Last week they renewed their demand for a mandatory embargo after South Africa arrested dozens of black dissidents, outlawed most major black organizations and closed two blackoriented newspapers.

The African group also sought a resolution calling for a halt to new investment in South Africa. But the only economic items in the Western proposal, sources said, are provisions calling on governments to review their economic relations with South Africa and to establish codes of conduct for foreign companies operating there.

Stringent economic sanctions could damage investments by American firms in South Africa, which in 1974 totaled about $1.5 billion. British investment, estimated at $2.2 billion, also would suffer.

City officials say that if Skaggs continue to operate the parlor, he will be rearrested.

2 pedestrians hurt on roads

A driver of one car was injured moderately and two pedestrians received minor injuries in separate accidents Thursday on area roads.

Fog was blamed for a one car accident at 7:45 a.m. on Highway 177, eight miles north of Cape Girardeau.

Injured was the driver of a southbound car, Hermina A. Westrich, 44, of Cape Girardeau, who was taken to the St. Francis Medical Center in Cape Girardeau with moderate injuries.

The highway patrol reported that the accident occured as the Westrich woman came to a stop sign at the junctions of Route V and Highway 177, was unable to see the stop sign due to the fog, and slid through the intersection and struck a dirt embankment.

A pedestrian, Paul Arthur Bartholomew, 22, of Gideon, received minor injuries when struck by a car driven by his wife, Judith Ann Bartholomew, 16.

The patrol said Mrs. Bartholomew was driving west on Highway 162 in Gideon at 12:05 p.m. when her husband stepped on-to the side of the road to wave her down and was struck.

Bartholomew was taken to theDunklin County Memorial Hospital in Kennett.

John William Stockwell, 49, of Poplar Bluff a pedestrian received minor injuries at 6:50 p.m. Thursday on Highway 60, four miles east of Poplar Bluff.

Indicators rising again

Economy coming out of summer doldrums

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its index that gives clues about the economy's future rose in September for the third straight month, a further sign the economy is coming out of its summer slowdown.

The increase in the index of leading indicators last month was a moderate three-tenths of 1 per cent. However, revised figures showed the August index rising 1.4 per cent, one of the largest monthly jumps in the past two years.

The nation's economic growth had slowed in the third quarter after a strong performance in the first half of the year, but the new figures indicated some improvement ahead in the fall.

President Carter is waiting to see how the economy looks before deciding whether to cut taxes next year to stimulate the economy and create new jobs.

The Commerce Department revised its August index from a rise of eight-tenths of 1 per cent to 1.4 per cent because of new figures showing big increases in net business formation. This indicator includes businesses' telephone installations and other signs of their willingness to expand.

The August increase was the biggest since a 2 per cent increase in March and a series of 2 and 3 per cent increases in mid-1975 at the end of the recession.

With a one-tenth increase in July, the total three-month increase is 1.8 per cent. In the second quarter of the year, the index was unchanged.

Although the over-all September index rose, the increases were confined to only four of the 10 indicators available. They were changes in the money supply, orders for plants and equipment, changes in sensitive prices and liquid assets.

Causing a drag on the index were poor performances in the average work week, layoff rate, stock prices, new orders, delivery performance and building permits.

The September index stood at 132.4, meaning it is 32.4 per cent ahead of where it was in 1967. At the start of this year the index was 126.5.

Originally, Carter wanted hearings to start this year on his tax bill. But he told a news conference Thursday, "I prefer to make final decisions after Congress completes its actions" on Social Security and energy bills.

Carter has been considering asking Congress to put the tax cut into effect in 1978 if the economy needs a quick boost and to have the rest of the program go into effect in 1979.

But he said Thursday that proper action on tax reduction and economic stimulation could be determined only after studying the economy. He also said the effect of higher Social Security taxes will have to be examined.

The tax program, he said, "will be a major element in a comprehensive economic program designed to promote a strong economy and to deal further with reducing inflation ... and unemployment."

The tax plan, as drafted by the Treasury Department, would cut the tax rate from $1,-739 to $1,370 for the average family of four earning $15,000 to $20,000.

It also would cut corporate taxes, but it would restrict deductions, including those for sales taxes, business lunches and capital gains.

Carter said congressional leaders unanimously agreed with him that the plan should be postponed. Some have said the plan is too ambitious to pass in one year.

The President acknowledged that business faces uncertainty because he has so many proposals pending.

He said that despite his disagreements with Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns, he agrees with him that business profits should be increased. He said that will be one of the objectives of his tax bill.

In other economic developments:

—Carter told a congressional delegation he will not impose import quotas on steel, but will enforce laws against dumping goods on the U.S. market at below-cost prices.

—The House sent a bill to the Senate to improve financing of the Social Security system by increasing taxes on wage-earners and their employers.

—The United Mine Workers union suspended its contract talks with coal employers, saying no progress had been made in three weeks of negotiations.

PROOF IN ADVERTISING?

How's your love life?

Advertisers who suggest you can put some zing into it if you use the right toothpaste or some other product should be forced to prove it, says a former consumer affairs minister in the Canadian government.

Laws protect consumers against advertisements that mislead in other ways, but not against "life style" claims, says Herb Gray. There would be "interesting problems," he thinks, if such claims were required to be tested in court.

So interesting, we think, that this is one thicket the law had best not plunge into — not because this kind of advertising cannot be misleading but because some things are just not susceptible to legal proof.

People have a natural desire to believe that the right toothpaste, mouthwash, deodorant or whatever will enhance their attractiveness to the opposite sex, impress their boss or excite the envy and admiration of their fellows. We can picture manufacturers trooping into court with stacks of signed testimonials from satisfied customers.

Hope springs eternal, in other words, and advertisers are only telling us what we want to thear. There's not much even a consumer advocate can do about that.

But the world has changed and so has the method of dealing with disruptions of the peace. There may have been a time when a Commander-in-Chief would order soldiers to march the very moment a disturbance occurred. Once upon a time large-scale war would be waged without risking the end of civilization; today, such war is unthinkable. In a matter of moments, we could wipe out a hundred million of our adversaries. They could, in the same amount of time, wipe out a hundred million of our people, taking half of our land in a matter of an hour.

UNEMPLOYMENT CLAIMS ARE LOWER

They could be reduced still further by strict enforcement of the letter of the law.

Those who quit a job of their own accord, or those who refuse to look for or accept work if they don't happen to particularly like it or don't want to work, should not receive compensation.

The law is fine. It is designed and written to protect those who lose their jobs and can't find another. That's as it should be. The difficulty has been that state officials too often approve claims for people tha law was never intended to benefit.

Some additions are also needed to the law. Seasonal workers who make as much in a few months as the average person does in a year should not be entitled to unemployment pay during their idle months. Neither should those who willingly go on strike.

THEY'RE MOVING TO RURAL AREAS

City observers many times comment that city people are leaving the congested areas and moving to rural and small town ones. Some of this, they claim, is a growing fear of violence by those who live in cities, some is a desire to get where air is purer, traffic lighter, living less complicated, the atmosphere better for raising children.

Whatever the causes, the fact many are moving to rural and small town areas is indicated by the subscriber experience of the Appeal. Never in the 109 year old history of the Appeal have so many city subscribers changed their addresses to rural routes or small towns. In Monroe County and its small towns, many who work in distant places have moved in. Many now live only a few acres in the country, but have enough land for a garden, outdoor leisure time space, some livestock if they want it.

The movement results in an asset for small towns, rural areas and the people who are doing the moving. We welcome them.

SUN SPOTS, GRASSHOPPERS

The publication, which has been forecasting the weather for more than a 100 years, says we're in for another cold winter. And we think it is only prudent to warn you that the same almanac predicted cold weather for last winter.

Editors of the almanac say they have a secret formula for making their long range forecasts.

We refuse to believe in long-range forecasts, perhaps because we are afraid to believe it.

Instead of depending on such things as the sun spots, and the tidal action of the moon, we're going to depend on the wooly worms and the grasshoppers. One is about as dependable as the other.

The wooly worms and the grasshopper predict a mild winter, and the folks at the Farmers Almanac can go hang.

With the coming of autumn we look forward with keen anticipation to a nice, mild winter. No more of that 20-below-and-three-feet-of-snowstuff for us. Such is un-American, unethical and should be illegal. And we refuse to believe it will happen again. ENERGY CONTROL PROSPECTS

It seems more than likely that the big oil and uranium companies will gain control of the major coal fields of the nation, giving them power over most of the energy now in general use in the United States.

Consumers will then be largely at the mercy of a few men and women, or companies.

About the only energy producing elements left uncontrolled by them are the sun, (solar energy), the wind, the tides and the flowing streams, and people often wonder when they will attempt to corner the market on these four.

HOW IT WAS FOR FOOTBALL

The advent of fall and the football season reminds older persons in Paris of how it was fifty and more years ago and how it is now in getting to Columbia for a University game.

Those who drove through did so over dirt, often mud, roads, with a number of flat tires to be expected and time required being from early Saturday morning until late Saturday night or early Sunday morning.

Those who preferred train travel left Paris early Saturday, changed at Moberly and again at Centralia, They did the same on the return trip, often not getting back into Paris until an early Sunday morning passenger train arrived.

Today, it's a driving matter of an hour to an hour and a half each way.

For the duration of the trip, the young man continued his discourse on the merits of science and the relative worthlessness of religion, while the old man continued praying the Rosary. As the train reached the young man's destination, he finally turned to his traveling companion and asked, "By the way, what's your name?"

"Louis Pasteur," came the reply.

THE HATCH ACT
BY PHYLLIS SCHLAFLY
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

The Hatch Act is the law that keeps federal employes from being used as a political machine by their political superiors. It saves government employes from political arm-twisting, overt or subtle, and it saves the public from having the taxpayers' money used for political campaign funds.

The use of government workers as political tools and the milking of government workers for campaign funds was a problem that started as far back as 1791. The assassination of President Garfield by a disappointed office-seeker is one of the famous legacies of the spoils system.

For a century and a half, the complaints did not produce a remedy because they were usually voiced by the party that was not in power. The majority party was usually satisfied with the status quo.

President Franklin Roosevelt signed the Hatch Act in 1939. It was twice challenged in lawsuits. Finally, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that "Congress has the power to regulate within reasonable limits the political conduct of federal employes in order to promote efficiency and integrity in the public service."

We are now told that "election reform" demands the repeal or relaxation of the Hatch Act, principally on the ground that federal employes should have the same rights to political activisim as other citizens.

However, no one has a constitutional right to hold a federal job and, if you do hold one, you must abide by reasonable regulations. The Hatch Act both protects the public from arbitrary harassment by federal political activists and protects federal employes from coercion and intimidation by their supervisors.

Demanding that federal employes make financial contributions to certain candidates is only one of the crufer ways to politicize government workers. Many other subtle methods are just as coercive. All a boss has to do is to show cordiality-partiality to employes who show up at a fund-raising dinner or distribute posters and campaign literature, and other employes quickly get the message.

Your Internal Revenue agent or OSHA inspector could ask you for a political contribution. Your mailman could ask you to sign a petition to put a candidate on the ballot. A federal employe could take leave to run for office, and then return after he loses; how would he feel about those working under him who did not campaign for him?

One incident unearthed during the Bert Lance case provides a classic example of why the Hatch Act should not be repealed. Robert Bloom, first deputy conptroller of the United States, testified before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee on Sept. 12 that his actions on the question of Lance's confirmation were in part motivated by his concern about his own job security and promotion prospects.

Perhaps the Hatch Act tightening up.

But if it were repealed or releaxed, it would convert the 2.8 million federal employes into a partisan political machine.

In regard to the 1st Amendment, the rights of some government employes to get into politics must be balanced off against the rights of other government employes to stay out of politics.

The overriding consideration, however, should be the interest of the public in protecting citizens from harassment by politicized bureaucrats, preventing administrative decisions from being distorted by political pressures and safeguarding the American people from being forced to finance the salaries of government employes who are working for political candidates and goals.

It took us 150 years to get the Hatch Act. We had better not give it up. We might not get it back.

Sickness Kills Money:

Drive to Unionize Nurses Hospitals

As Rooms Race to $400 a Day

NEW YORK -- I encountered two awesome phenomena during a visit to a sick friend in a hospital just a few streets south of Columbia University:on the corner was a watchtower. In it were armed guards constantly scanning the surrounding streets. And once safely in my friend's hospital room I learned that its cost was $269 a day. Just for the room alone. Not the aspirins, even.

And I was told that by today's standard rates, this private room was a bargain. Why not a semi-private? Well, the cost runs to $200 a day there -- and far more elsewhere. And special care was needed.

Later, a swift check of other medical centers disclosed my friend's room truly was a bargain. At Sloan-Kettering Memorial Hospital, the private room rate is $347 daily. At Roosevelt it is $325 a day. In New York Hospital it's $320. There are also bargains at Lenox Hill Hospital at $295 each 24 hours and at Mount Sinai, $280.

You might think that the proletariat could fare better in the municipal hospitals compared with the voluntary (civic and religious) institutions I just surveyed. Not really. The cost in the municipal hospitals' corporation installations runs to $264 a day.

Of course I didn't cover all the voluntary hospitals. But I was told by a medical administration specialist that the private rooms now are moving briskly up toward $400 a day -- and the "semi-private" and even some of the modern "wards" are well past $200 daily.

Digging further, I note that a Council on Wage-- Price Stability report to the President reveals that hospital costs have risen over 1,000 per cent since 1950. But one chap in the Paper Handlers Union wraps it up more colorfully than statistics can:

"Five days in a community hospital today," he says, "costs about the same as two weeks in a luxury hotel in Hawaii, including meals and round trip air fare from the West Coast.

"In 1950, just 27 years ago, it cost an average $15.62 per day for a semi-private room including x-rays, drugs, therapy and other hospital services but excluding doctors' fees. Today the average hospital room including the same services, is $244.88 per day."

The point made by the union actually is that many patients don't pay their entire bill. But the insurance companies do. Medicaid and Medicare, which are ripped off hundreds of millions of dollars yearly, do. This means -- you, the taxpayer.

Further, a spokesman for the United Auto Workers complains that the high cost of medical care is stirring labor-management conflict. For the first time in many years, he says, "health care costs are an important factor in labor strife."

He charges corporate efforts to contain health and welfare and medical coverage costs with the responsibility for union unrest such as the recent miners' illegal mass walk-out and last fall's four-week auto union strike at the FordMotor Co.

Well, there are those who say that in many hospitals today productivity and service are lower than a crane's gullet. And wages are higher than the average American worker's income and constitute 50 per cent or more of the cost of running voluntary hospitals such as St. Luke's, St. Clare's, Columbia Presbyterian and Mount Sinai.

And these wages have just begun to mount. In this city, there is, for example, a militant union chief, Leon Davis, who heads the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees AFL-CIO -- otherwise known as District 1199. It sets the national pace for hospital pay and fringe increases.

He built up this organization of some 50,000 members from a small drug clerks union. He has delivered to his people by striking hospitals, clinics and other medical institutions. Some of his mass picket lines have been an urban version of commandos. They've seized hospital administrators' executive offices. They've stopped deliveries of food, medical supplies and even oxygen for awhile. During past strikes whole wards and wings have been emptied and patients removed so they could be cared for elsewhere.

For months now he has been urging his followers to put aside $10 a week for "emergency" use during the contract renewal period next year. His slogan is, "We've got a date in'78.

Davis tells his people they must be ready to do whatever it takes for as long as it takes to win much--needed contract improvements in the hospitals in 1978. Davis always knows what his own constituency wants. He will deliver to them. It will be noisy. He also knows that virtually every one of the 57 voluntary hospitals in New York is losing money. Heavily.

Further, he has launched a drive to unionize Registered Nurses (RNs). There are some 200,000 of them in the American Nurses Association which he is raiding. He tells potential RN recruits that they can count on the solidarity of his other union members in the hospital -- technicians, service people, professionals.

There was a two-day strike at Brookdale Medical Center here recently. It was run by Davis's union. The RNs won. Davis said that no doubt this hospital would have been shut down if it had not settled in two days. The District 1199 members would have observed the picket line.

So Davis is doing his thing. Soon there will be a drive for vertical (industrial-type) top-to-bottom unionism in all hospitals. The only trouble is that it would take the Secret Service to find a hospital in America which isn't losing money. Certainly there are other hospital costs. But who will pay the inevitable $500 a day for a private room? And who says a hospital can't die?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

by Jack Anderson
and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON - The Justice Department has pieced together enough evidence, insiders say, to indict ex-Rep. Otto Passman, D-La., in the Korean payoff scandal. But out of compassion, government attorneys are reluctant to bring charges against the aging, ailing Passman.

He was born at the turn of the century to tenant farmers, and his early memories are of meals of unseasoned corn bread and clabbered milk. In the summers in backward Washington Parish, his feet were bare as the table, and at 10 he was hired out to a neighboring farmer fo- $5 a month.

The memory of his grim childhood developed in Passman a fierce attachment for every dollar that passed through his hands. Apparently, he couldn't bring himself to let go of the cash that his Korean benefactors allegedly proffered.

On congressional junkets, he was an almost compulsive barterer and buyer at jewelry stores from Geneva to Hong Kong. On his return to the United States, he would demand that Customs pass his luggage unopened.

Customs officers visited his Capitol office in 1964 to quiz him about bringing in undeclared jewelry. Passman admitted he had brought some jewelry home with him from Hong Kong, but he insisted it was just on consignment. He, therefore, didn't feel a need to clear it through customs. The Customs agents left without further argument.

While Passman treated every dollar with tenderness, he was not unmindful of those less blessed. He tithed to the church and was an active Mason. When friends were down on their luck, he was available for a loan and a lecture on economy and Christian living.

At age 77, he is beginning to falter. His six-foot frame, once lean and straight, is now frail. His voice, once stern with righteousness, now quivers. He recently spent 27 days in the hospital; now he must go back for additional treatment.

He told us that he had refused some jewelry that Tongsun Park had once offered him. The only money he ever accepted, he said, was in exchange for watches. He dealt in antique watches and sold "several" to Park, Passman said. Then he added plaintively: "I don't know why people are after me. I am just not able to fight any more."

Watergate Incident: There are still a few jigsaw pieces missing from the Watergate puzzle. The Nixon tapes reveal, for example, that Richard Nixon hoped to save his own skin by offering the special prosecutor a sacrificial lamb.

The scapegoat he had in mind, according to the tapes, was his own close friend and former law partner, ex-Attorney General John Mitchell. It was whispered around Washington that Mitchell had learned of the double-cross and had turned balky and bitter.

The real truth, we've now learned, is that Mitchell offered himself as a sacrificial lamb. He would be willing to plead guilty to a felony, he proposed, if the special prosecutor would spare Nixon.

Mitchell directed his attorney, William Hundley, to present the offer to the special prosecutor's office in 1973. Hundley spoke to James Neal, who was then second in command under Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox. The prosecutors, however, refused to make a deal.

So far as our sources know, Mitchell never told Nixon about his gesture.

Footnote: Of course, Nixon was pardoned, and Mitchell is now serving out his sentence. Attorney Hundley, meanwhile, has made a personal appeal to Attorney General Griffin Bell to release Mitchell for medical treatment.

"In typical John Mitchell fashion," wrote Hundley, "he down-played the medical problem when interviewed by the probation officer ... I am really concerned that the constant pain, the need for surgery and the continued incarceration, coupled with all his other problems, could be too much even for a strong man like John Mitchell."

Merry Xxmas: Exxon simply won't allow two X's in Xmas. Like a modern scrooge, the giant, multi-billion-dollar oil consortium has stopped a small Dallas firm from selling XXmas cards.

The Horchow Collection, in its Christmas card catalog, offered an ingenious card patterned after an Exxon credit card but using "Xxmas Greetings" in place of the word Exxon.

The card seemed harmless enough; it might even be considered a free ad for the oil conglomerate. But Exxon takes itself with such seriousness that it threatened legal action.

"Exxon's lawyers took exception to it," explained Horchow's Ms. Kitty Lane, with a notable lack of Christmas cheer in her voice. "To try to fight something like Exxon, it's a losing battle."

Horchow sent out a letter to customers who had ordered the card, asking them to choose another one. "If Exxon were represented by a reindeer instead of a tiger," the letter suggested, "it might have been a different story."

In New York City, an Exxon spokesman confirmed that the company had asked Horchow to kill the Xxmas card. "It was clearly a trade mark infringement," he told us.

We thought we heard him add: "Humbug!"

Hoffa records checked

HONESDALE, Pa. (AP) — A Pennsylvania coroner says he is checking the dental records of Jimmy Hoffa in an effort to determine whether a skeleton found in a wooded area is that of the missing former boss of the Teamsters union.

Energy tax challenged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan coalition in the Senate wants to end debate on a $49 billion package of energy tax breaks and ship the bills back to committee with instructions to start over.

The group's strength is so far unmeasured. But if the Senate approves the effort, it could doom chances of any energy tax legislation this year.

Carter style questioned

A liberal northern Democratic senator said the Carter administration's "effectiveness ratio is going down."

House Republican leader John Rhodes of Arizona, who last Sunday called the Carter administration "a terrible failure," said the administration's problem is not style but "ineptitude."

Arms embargo supported

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The five Western nations on the U.N. Security Council, including the United States, have agreed to support a mandatory arms embargo against South Africa.

But African delegates are unhappy with the Western proposal because it provides only for a six-month embargo, which could be renewed, and because it includes no economic restrictions.

Palestinians responsible

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A young Palestinian trained as an aviation engineer led the hijacking of a West German jetliner two weeks ago, a Palestinian splinter group said in claiming responsibility for the terrorist operation.

Millionaire kidnaped

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — A millionaire Dutch businessman was kidnaped early today as he left a nightclub, and a telephone caller claimed West Germany's Red Army Faction terrorist group was responsible.

Witnesses said about five persons subdued Maurits Caransa, 61, after a struggle outside the Continental Club, where he had been playing bridge, and forced him into a car. Caransa owns a chain of hotels and clubs in Holland and is prominent in Jewish activities.

Supporters of the Red Army Faction also claimed responsibility for bombings of two West German car showrooms in Milan, one in and Rome and a German engineering company office in Lisbon today. No injuries were reported.

Callers told police the bombs, like others that damaged West German property across Europe last week, were planted to avenge the Oct. 18 prison deaths of three leaders of the German terrorist underground — Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe.

The Amsterdam kidnapping followed a warning by West German Justice Minister HansJochen Vogel that the prison deaths, which officials termed suicides, were not "acts of resignation" but a sign that "further attacks are looming."

A German-speaking man called the Amsterdam newspaper Het Parool and told a switchboard operator: "We are the Red Army Faction. We have Caransa. You will hear from us."

Dutch police are holding a member of the Red Army Faction, Knut Folkerts, 25, on murder charges. He was arrested following a Sept. 22 shootout at Utrecht in which a policeman was killed and is also wanted for terrorist activities in West Germany.

Caransa has extensive properties in Holland, about half of them in the hotel and catering industry. He also sits on the boards of a number of companies.

The businessman is married and has one grown daughter. During World War II Caransa spent 13 weeks in a Nazi camp in Holland with other Jews awaiting deportation to concentration camps in Germany, but he was never sent. Friends say he makes regular donations to Jewish organizations.

Lung cancer vulnerable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Multiple drug therapy is giving life expectancies of as long as 18 months to some lung cancer patients who usually would die within three months of diagnosis, a National Cancer Institute scientist says.

Dr. John D. Minna said Thursday that small-cell lung cancer, a rapid spreading type of the disease, is proving vulnerable to high dose multi-drug chemotherapy used alone or with radiation.

About 20,000 of the nation's 98,000 lung cancer victims each year have small-cell lung cancer.

Minna told a seminar at the National Institutes of Health that the median survival for untreated patients with the small-cell cancer is three months after diagnosis.

Summarizing recent studies from 10 medical centers using multiple-drug chemotherapy and radiation treatment, Minna said median survival for these 563 patients is approaching one year.

He disclosed that unpublished data from three NCI treatment centers using concentrated combination therapy show median survival reaching almost 18 months in patients with early-stage small-cell cancer.

"This figure is extremely good compared with other results," Minna said. "I think this shows the disease can be cured with chemotherapy or chemotherapy combined with other treatments."

But he said optimism should be tempered with the knowledge that many of these surviving patients will be dead in two years, indicating better treatments still are needed.

He also stressed that the newest therapy is in large part still experimental and available only at large cancer treatment centers.

Since the multi-drug therapy gets best results with earlystage cancer that hasn't spread too far, early detection is important, he said.

High-risk persons, such as middle-aged heavy smokers, should get annual chest X-rays and periodic examination of mucus from the lungs to see if cancer cells are present, he added.

Despite treatment advances, Minna said, 80 per cent of the 98,000 persons who develop lung cancer this year will be dead within two years of diagnosis.

Lung cancer is the No. 1 malignancy killing men and rates as No. 2 behind breast cancer as the most fatal form for women. Most lung cancer can be attributed to cigarettes and Minna said he was disturbed by recent increases in women smoking.

Vaught entered a voluntary plea of guilty to the charge Sept. 30 and made oral application to the court for probation for an Oct. 26 report. Judge Craig denied Vaught probation and ordered him to begin serving his sentence, which involved the theft of $3,529.24 from Cook Grain Co. for soybeans which did not exist. False grain inspection and weight certificates were used in the theft on May 6.

Gerald Johnson withdrew this not guilty plea and pleaded guilty to a stealing charge filed in connection with the theft of a citizens band radio valued at $100 and $100 in cash, property of Oliver Kirkpatirck, on May 7. His oral application for probation resulted in a pre-sentencing investigation being ordered for a report bact to court on Nov. 23.

A one-year jail sentence assessed Tyrone Price on a stealing charge, amended from armed robbery, was stayed and he was placed on one-year supervised probation.

Price was originally charged with the armed robbery of Helmes Quick Sac at Sikeston in a change of venue case from Scott County.

New officers

Phil Barkett Jr., left, has been re-elected president of the Scott County unit of the American Cancer Society for the coming campaign year. Other officers for this year are Sandra Sharp, secretary and Don Agnew, treasurer. Tom Arnold of Benton will serve as vice president of the group, which has set the goal for the coming year at $7,156.43.

Phil Barkett Jr. was reelected president Thursday night of the Scott County unit of the American Cancer Society.

Other officers for the coming campaign year are Tom Arnold of Benton, vice president; Sandra Sharp of Sikeston, secretary and Don Agnew of Sikeston, treasurer.

Chairman serving this year will be Ernest Elledge, public education; Dr. Robert Ahlvin, professional education; Pat Grojean, public information; Harryette Campbell, memorials; Addie Mae Jones, special events; and Roger Tolliver, nominating.

A goal of $7,156.43 was set for the 1977-1978 campaign.

Elledge reported that local activities for the Great American Smokeout, set Nov. 17 are well under way. An interview with Don Agnew of Sikeston and Diana Lafferty, president of the Parent-Teacher Organization at Morehouse, was taped Thursday and will be shown at 6:30 p.m. today on Cable television Channel 6, preceding the Sikeston football game. The two will be interviewed by a Sikeston High School student on the Great American Smokeout and smoking in general.

Posters and pledge cards for the project have been placed in all banks and in most doctor's offices in Sikeston. Elledge hopes to have students gathering pledges at the high school on a continuous basis, and Nov. 5 and Nov. 12, members of the Sikeston Junior Woman's Club will assist the Cancer Society by manning a booth at the Kingsway Mall where pledge cards may be signed.

Linda Lawrence, of Cape Girardeau, field representative for the Cancer society in Southeast Missouri, presented three cancer films to Elledge for use in the school systems. The films will be shown in the high school, junior high and middle schools, to about 2500 students, beginning next week. Another film will be shown to 2200 elementary students.

Fateful Congress

The 20th Congress held by the Soviet Communist party Feb. 14-25, 1956, was one of the most fateful gatherings of modern times. At the Moscow sessions, Nikita S. Khrushchev denounced Joseph Stalin, repudiated the cruelties of Stalinism and proclaimed a new policy of peaceful coexistence with the West. The new party line alienated Chinese Communists and hastened the split that continues to divide the Communist world.

'Butterflies' wins audience with first show

By Sue Ellen Payne

If I wasn't so sure (or am I?) that this was a Sikeston Little Theatre production, I would swear "Butterflies are Free" was on Broadway for the first time.

"Butterflies are Free", Sikeston Little Theatre's first production of the 1977-78 season is a contemporary romantic comedy-drama by Leonard Gershe that WAS highly successful on Broadway. It became a popular movie starring Goldie Hawn and Edward Albert.

However, not seeing the Broadway run or the movie either, but being familiar with the script and also a great theatre and film buff, I believed I could be more objective with this production and its characters.

Veteran Little Theatre performer Lee Crites almost had me convinced that he was actually blind. The very astute young man who memorizes how many steps it takes to reach the drugstore, laundry and delicatessan, tries to break away from his mother's apron strings without much success in the first act. There is something missing in the character, Don Baker's life, and he is trying to find it.

Crites, truly dynamic in his performance as Don Baker, can be remembered as last season's scarecrow in the "Wizard of Oz" and Brick in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof".

After first seeing Don in his not-so-perfect New York apartment, in steps "the girl-next door," Jill Tanner or "Mrs. Benson" as she is later known in the play.

Jill, portrayed by Joyce Sanders of Charleston is a newcomer to the Sikeston Little Theatre, but, that doesn't take away from her performance as the sometimes half-wit with the incurable appetite. Despite her vices, she becomes a great help to Don and actually falls for him. Joyce is convincing and marvelously enjoyable in her role as the butterfly.

Both Don and Jill are portrayed at their highest in a scene played excellently as they are shown sharing confidences after they first make love. Both actors are partially shown in underwear which today is not only seen in plays and movies, but also on television and the act should be thought of as real as brushing your teeth.

The hovering, domineering Mrs. Baker Don's mother, appears next played by Trish McAlister, another newcomer to the Sikeston Little Theatre stage. Mrs. Baker waltzes in, effervescent in half a bottle of Saks Fifth Avenue's best cologne, and tries to persuade Don in believing he has made a terrible mistake in leaving home. McAlister plays a vital role to the performance but it is difficult to believe that she is actually that domineering in real life.

The cameo appearance of Francis Schumacher as Ralph Austin, a boyfriend of Jill's plants the seed that will rise to the excellent finish of the performance. Schumacher, who also built the set for the show, is too a veteran of several Little Theatre productions.

Along with the excellent direction by Jim Wenneker and many others on the production staff, Sikeston's production of "Butterflies are Free", is truly worth the ticket price. I could hardly tell it was opening night.

Performances will continue through Saturday night with curtain time at 8 p.m. at the Sikeston Activity Center, 201 S. Kingshighway. Don't miss it.

By the way, I could have sworn I was on Broadway last night.

Toothsome Effort

A qualified researcher visiting the National Archives building in Washington, D.C. can touch the Royal Fijian whale tooth. King Thakoban of the Fiji Islands sent the cucumber-shaped tooth to President Grant in 1870 with a letter asking for a treaty of friendship. The tooth, the King's most precious possession, symbolized his faith and solemn purpose.

Dear Ann Landers

Reader says pre-marital sex not worth it

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing this for "The Wife of a Sex Maniac." Please print it. She needs to know a few things. The woman wrote that she and her husband are in their early 60s and she has had enough sex to last her a lifetime. Her husband, however, is still very much interested in bedroom gymnastics. To keep him from going elsewhere she never refuses him and even pretends to enjoy it.

I went along with "wife" to that point -- but when she said, "I am in favor of premarital sex on the basis that it's wise to learn what the other person's sex appetite is like BEFORE marriage" -- wrong, wrong, wrong.

I have been married three years to a man who had an inappetite for sex when we were going together. We saw each other every night for two years and at least three nights a week for 11 months before that. He was after me all the time. I was both flattered and exhausted. I also wondered how I would be able to keep up with him after marriage. Well, I didn't have to worry. Now I find myself begging him to make love to me and it's degrading.

So let this be a lesson to girls who think they have to try it out for "educational purposes." You won't learn a thing. -- I Didn't

Dear I.D.: You speak the truth, lady, There is something about the "forbidden" that makes it much more appealing. Why? Human nature -- the excitement of risk-taking.

And it can work in reverse, too. Some married couples report that their sex life improved greatly after marriage. They became more relaxed, more comfortable with one another and their love grew deeper and more meaningful. The most erogenous zone in both male female is located between the eyebrows and the hairline.

BOOK REVIEW

Picking up effortlessly at the point where he left off in his best-selling "All Things Bright and Beautiful," James Herriot once again takes his delighted readers on a journey back in time to the days when he was a young veterinarian.

World War II is raging and Herriot has left his rural Yorkshire practice to join the RAF and become a pilot. But while his body is undergoing the rigors of basic training, Herriot's mind returns ever so often to his beloved Yorkshire and thus his book has only a little in it about the war and his part in it and a great deal about the people and the animals that played such an important role in his life.

Readers of Herriot's two previous books will know what to expect in "All Things Wise And Wonderful." There is no plot line, as such. Rather the book is a wonderful collection of stories about the many, many things that happened to Herriot as he made his rounds tending to the animals that needed his gentle ministrations.

Two of the best defensive clubs in the Northern Division (apologies to Cape Central) will be featured in tonight's 7:30 clash between the Jackson Indians and Sikeston Bulldogs.

Under coach Paul Webber the Indians have established a long tradition for hard-hitting defense. A solid wishbone attack has helped carry them to a 6-1 mark this year. Added incentives for the Injuns will be stinging memories of a 22-21 defeat last year that they think they never should have lost.

Meanwhile, Sikeston has embarked on a rebuilding project with defense of last year's conference title now out of the picture. Stepping into the Bulldog backfield will be sophomores Johnny Longstreet and Gary Lasater. Both are big, with good speed, and both had a big hand in this year's junior varsity team running up a 6-1 card. Another soph, Terry Duncan, will join the defensive lineup at halfback. He replaces Gary Leonard, Sikeston's leading rusher, who is injured.

Glynn Felton, who has played sparingly in games of late, will be available for fulltime duty. If the offense continues to bog down, the sprinter may move back into the backfield, where he led the team in rushing through the first four games.

A year ago at this time runner James Wilder had over a thousand rushing yards. Right now, all the Bulldog backs combined barely top that figure. A year ago Sikeston was completing passes at a 60 per cent clip. The Dogs' passing attack has been successful well less than half thatmark. And, the problems can be traced back to the medical report.

Lineman Scotty Heeb was the first to go, exiting for the season in the second game. Injuries to Alfred White, Mike Lasater, Felton and many others, have contributed to a musical chairs setup in the Bulldog offensive line. As everyone knows,timing and experience is far more important on offense than defense and moving the ball has been the biggest problem facing Sikeston this year. Four times in eight games the Dogs have totalled less than 150 yards in a game.

When everyone was healthy, against Perryville, Kennett and Caruthersville, the Bulldogs moved the ball well. Kennett is a young team, but Perryville (when Sikeston played them) and Caruthersville are well respected for their defensive abilities.

The defense, on the other hand, has kept Sikeston in the game throughout all of the contests. The average yield of 175 yards per game approximates what last year's SHS defense gave up, but this year's team has surrendered only 55 points in eight starts, an average of less than seven per outing. Last year's team gave up 13 points per game. And, they were on the field much less than this year.

It will be thrown back on the Sikeston players' shoulders tonight. The Indians are a super-tough team looking for revenge for last year's last-minute loss to Sikeston. (The heart-stopper, 22-21 on a last-second field goal, was the first win for Sikeston against Jackson in four years.) If some of the "wise " seniors can lend some of their expertise to the underclassmen who are being groomed to take their place in '78, Jackson's revenge may have to wait a year!

Imo Out

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

With junior varsity tournaments coming up next week at Bell City and Fisk, the 1977-78 high school basketball season is upon us again. It seems like it was only last month that Charleston took second place in the 3A state tournament to bring a curtain down on that thrillingcampaign.

We want to reiterate our request for all area coaches to please mail in their schedules and rosters to our sports desk. We would like to receive both boys and girls schedules. The address is: Sports Desk, Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid St., Sikeston, MO 63801.

What's in store in SeMo basketball this year? It's going to be hard to top last year's campaign, but this season is going another dandy.

Preseason favorites? In Class 1A, with all due respect to what should be fine clubs at Richland, Advance and Bell City, I'm picking Delta C-7 to be the strongest of the small schools and make a run at the state championship. All key personnel are returning from the team that gave Matthews all they wanted in the semifinals of the 1A Regional at Bloomfield back in March. If Coach Gary Russo can teach his team to play even respectably on defense, the chargers will be tough to beat.

Look for the old stand-bye to be strong again in Class 2A. Lilbourn should be strong again after an off year lost season and may have more good personnel back than any other 2A club. But you can bet that Woodland, Kelly and Notre Dame will be right there, too.

Ricky Frazier, Percy Owens, Wilbert McCain and Michael Smith are gone, but I think Charleston will have to try hard to keep from winning 20 ballgames this season. Mike Dean and Danny Farmer are holdovers from last year's powerhouse, and amultitude of talented B teamers should keep new coach Lennies McFerren stocked with good ballplayers for quite a while. And watch for Kennett to be a sleeper in 3A this season.

Cape Central and Poplar Bluff will battle it out in the fight for a 4A state tournament berth. I'd give the nod to Central right now. Sophomores played a key role in last year's fine Central squad, and those players will have a season under their belts that could make a big difference for the Tigers.

Sikeston lost their top nine players, but the Bulldogs aren't about to roll over and play dead for anybody this campaign. There will be no shortage of frontline height for the Dogs, although experience there will be a big question mark. If Bud Spears can come up with some offensive punch from the guard spot and a floor leader to take charge, Sikeston might fool a few people.

So get ready to get your season tickets, folks. It's gonna be a heck of a year.

A pat on the back is due to Gary Howard and the Board of Directors of the Southeast Missouri Amateur Baseball Hall of Fame for their splendid banquet Saturday night at the Elks Lodge.

Howard took the bull by the horns and got the organization off the ground, providing something that has long been lacking in Southeast Missouri sports -- a means of recognizing and honoring our own local athletes. The official recognition given to the first nine inductees was overdue.

It looks as if the SeMo Amateur Baseball Hall of Fame is going to be a success. It would be nice if something similar could be done to honor the local men who have excelled in other sports. What would be wrong with a SeMo Football Hall of Fame? Or the same for basketball? How about the great golfers from this area?

It would be worth thinking about seriously.

And while we're on the subject of banquets, the Ducks Unlimited fund raising dinner Monday evening at Ramada Inn was a success for the fifth straight year.

The affair was well-organized, largely due to the efforts of Bill Dillon, Art Hobbs, Jim Cox and Jim Warf. Those who shelled out their ten becks for the cocktail party and dinner were treated to a delicious meal, a fine program and fellowship with other outdoor enthusiasts. I wish I had a nickel for every duck hunting story that was rehashed Monday night.

The money raised will eventually come right back to the contributors, in the form of better duck hunting in the future. Ducks Unlimited leases land in Canada to restore and develop waterfowl habitat, one of the keys to a good waterfowl population.

Keep up the good work, DU!

SJHS teams finish year unbeaten

CHARLESTON -- Sikeston's junior high powerhouse swept gridiron twinbill at Charleston Thursday. Both the eighth and ninth grade teams finished undefeated.

"George (Hale) and Martin (Bass) have a lot to look forward to next year," said coach Mike Foster about his team. "This is a good group of boys."

The eighth grade defeated Charleston's eighth-graders 14-12 to complete a third undefeated season at 5-0. After a first period score, set up by a flubbed snap on a Sikeston punt, the Bulldogs tied the count in the second period and went ahead to stay in the third. Although Charleston closed within two points on a 65-vard run three minutes before the game's end, Sikeston lost a six-pointer on a disputed play that would have made the final score not quite so close.

The Sikeston freshmen completed their perfect season with a 24-0 blitz of Charleston in the nightcap. Head coach George Hale had plenty of opportunity to give players experience. While the defense was racking up its fifth shutout in six games, SJHS had jumped to a 16-0 halftime lead. Secure with the two-touchdown lead and a strong defense, Hale was able to get some subs on the field in the second quarter and everyone got to play in the second half.

The Sikeston freshmen outscored their six opponents 101 to eight this year, the only comping late in a win over Poplar Bluff.

In the eighth grade game, a short run put the Jays on the board first, early in the initial period. The hosts got their opportunity when Sikeston dropped back to punt and the Bullpup punter elected to down the ball rather than attempt a risky punt after a bad snap. Taking over at the 20, Charleston scored on a 12-yard run for a 6-0 lead.

Nick Garner tied the count for Sikeston on a four-yard run in the second quarter. The Bullpups jumped offsides on the conversion attempt, but stood even at 6-6.

Sikeston scored again, just before half, when Steve Green went 18 yards on a bootleg for a score. Timmie Wyse ran the two-point conversion and Sikeston led at intermission 14-6.

The 65-yard run put The Jays within two at 14-12 with three minutes left, but a run for two failed. Sikeston took the following kickoff, drove down the field and appeared to score when a Sikeston back fumbled in the endzone. The officials ruled that the runner had fumbled before reaching the endzone and the score was nullified.

The eighth-graders have won their last 19 ballgames.

The frosh had a much easier time of it in their 24-0 romp.A Mike Sherman to Edwin Beasley pass that covered 45 yards put the visitors on the board first. When Rusty Greer ran the conversion in, Sikeston led 8-0.

Halfback Undra Lane put another score on the board for Sikeston in the second period, crossing the goal from the four. Scotty McDowell ran the two-pointer for a 16-0 lead at half.

Fullback Rusty Greer scored the third Sikeston touchdown early in the third period on a three-yard run. McDowell added the final points on the conversion run.

Cardinal punter Carrell: Paid to get them off

ST. LOUIS (AP) — His punts aren't the highest. They don't float featherlike in the air. They aren't the longest either. And sometimes they aren't very pretty.

But none of that matters to Duane Carrell, 28, a well-traveled veteran now with the St. Louis Cardinals. What matters is that they aren't blocked.

"What I'm supposed to do is make sure I get the ball off," he said as the Big Red prepared for a National Football League contest against the New York Giants Monday. "I feel that with a lot of people coming in hard at me, the idea is to get it off and worry about distance later."

Carrell was picked up by the Cardinals two weeks ago, shortly after they released Terry Joyce. All too often, Joyce, a graceful, lanky punter, booted them into the chest of defenders.

"I don't have the great natural ability to kick the ball a mile everytime out the way a Ray Guy (Oakland's all-pro punter) can. I can get itout there, but not 50 or 60 yards every time."

The lack of style and distance might have something to do with Carrell's size; at 5-feet-10 and 185 pounds, he's just about the smallest punter in the league.

It's the second time Carrell has worn the St. Louis uniform. The first time was in 1973 when the Cards brought him to training camp as a place-kicker. Unfortunately, he had to contend with a guy named Jim Bakken. He was released.

Since then he has played in the World Football League. He also has punted for Dallas, Los Angeles, and the New York Jets, where he set a club record of 81 punts last year.

He is especially glad to be back in St. Louis. His wife is from nearby Pittsfield, Ill.

Thursday's Sports In Brief
By The Associated Press
GOLF

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Mac McLendon scrambled to a five-under-par 66 and a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $125,000 Pensacola Open Golf Tournament.

McLendon one-putted 12 times, needed only 10 strokes on the greens on the back nine at the tree-lined, 6,849-yard Pensacola Country Club and took the lead with his longest putt of the day, a 20-footer for birdie, on the 18th hole.

FIGURE SKATING

MONCTON, New Brunswick — Charles Tickner of Littleton, Colo., and women's world champion Linda Fratianne of Northridge, Calif., led the first phase of competition in compulsory figures at Skate Canada 77.

Tickner had 14 ordinals and 40.96 points. Miss Fratianne held a comfortable lead with 10 ordinals 43.28 points.

Tickner was only slightly ahead of Robin Cousins of Britain who has 16 ordinals and 41 points.

Among the women, Claudia Kristofics-Binder of Austria is a distant second with 20 ordinals and 41.20 points while Emi Watanabe of Japan is third with 26 ordinals and 40.84 points.

TENNIS

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Fourth seeded Billie Jean King won two singles matches and moved into the semifinals of the $75,000 Borinquen tennis classic.

Top-seeded Betty Stove of the Netherlands bruised her knees in a nasty fall but went on to beat Brigitte Cuypers of South Africa 6-4, 7-5 and attain the quarter-finals.

Ms. King came from behind to defeat fellow New Yorker Kristien Shaw 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 in a gruelling two-hour-and-20-minute match.

Three hours later, she was back on center court against Romania's Virginia Ruzici, whom she bested 6-3, 6-1.

In a quarter-final match seventh-seeded Joanne Russell of Naples, Fla., defeated second seeded Rosie Casals of Sausalito, Calif., 6-4, 6-2. Unseeded Janet Newbury of St. Petersburg, Fla., defeated Betsy Nagelsen of Winnetka, Ill., 7-5, 6-1, then went on to whip Wendy Turnbull of Australia, who was seeded eighth in a quarter-final match, 6-2, 6-0.

PERTH, Australia — Australians Geoff Masters and Tony Roche and American Hank Pfister won their way into the semifinals of the Hitachi Tennis Classic.

Jiri Hibrec of Czechoslovakia also advanced, beating Bill Scanlon 6-4, 7-6, but referee Vic Anderson was prepared to report him for unbecoming conduct.

THE COLLEGES

When Bob Blackman was named Cornell's head football coach before the start of the season, Athletic Director Dick Schultz said, "We're sending a warning to all the other Ivy League schools that the sleeping giant has awakened."

Fair enough.

Now, maybe someone should get the giant out on the football field. Cornell losts its sixth game in six tries Saturday to jump to number one in the Bottom Ten as the only winless school in major college football, besides Northwestern (0-7).

Rice (1-6) fell to number 3 after the defense fell short of its 47 point-per-game, but could move back up. The Owls must play in the daylight this week against Arkansas.

UTEP, outscored 115-10 in its last two games, has a bye this week, and Coach Bill Michaels plans to take the team (1-6) to Lourdes in search of a cure.

Milton defeated Lakeland. TCU (1-4) was ordered to show cause why it should be reinstated in the Bottom Ten.

THE RANKINGS

Team (Record)	Last Week	Next Loss
1) Cornell (0-6)	13-17, Dartmouth	Yale
2) Northwestern (0-7)	16-35, Ohio St.	Purdue
3) Rice (1-6)	14-28, Texas A & M	Arkansas
4) UTEP (1-6)	3-66, Arizona State	Idle
5) Wake Forest (1-6)	10-12, Virginia	Clemson
6) Virginia (1-5-1)	Def. Wake Forest 12-10	Syracuse
7) Utah State (1-5)	Idle	Boise State
8) Vanderbilt (1-6)	14-26, Mississippi	Idle
9) (tie) Kansas (1-5-1)	0-21, Okla. State	Iowa State
10) Kansas State (2-6)	13-28 Missouri	Oklahoma

11) Columbia (2-4), 12) Princeton (2-4), 13) Tulane (2-5), 14) New Mexico (2-5), 15) Syracuse (2-5), 16) Utah (2-4), 17) Oregon State (2-5), 18) TCU (2-4), 19) Indiana (2-4-1), 20) Hawaii (3-4).

CRUMMY GAME OF THE WEEK -- Virginia vs. Syracuse.

ROUT OF THE WEEK – (tie) Oklahoma vs. Kansas State and Iowa State vs. Kansas.

SPECIAL CITATION: When Notre Dame players went to see the movie "Rocky" the night before the USC game, one player thought it was the biography of the great Fighting Irish coach, "Kunte Rocky."

FLAG DAY: Banning and Locke High Schools (Los Angeles) were penalized a total of 418 in one game.

THE PROS

The game was held at Tampa Bay and as usual Tampa's offense was held at bay.

Averaging six points a game, the Bottom Ten leading Bucs took it on the chinstrap for their 20th straight time in regular season play, 13-0. Elsewhere, Atlanta's Nick Mike-Mayer broke a streak of six straight missed field goals to kick ninth-rated Chicago (2-4).

The turning point came before the game when Mike-Mayer agreed that he would no longer act as his own holder on place kick attempts.

Number two Buffalo prepared all week for Cleveland's outside running game. But once the Browns were inside the stadium, the hopeless Bills (1-5) proved no match for them.

Sunday marked the return of the 49ers cheerleaders (the Nuggets), who had stayed away from the previous week's game because they felt they weren't appreciated by the team (1-5). They returned at the request of the San Francisco management, although Jim Plunkett was allowed to call their formations.

Texas Tech to key on Campbell in bid for upset over Longhorns

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

"I think so much of him," says the Texas Tech coach, "that I went out and bought a truck just like him."

Sloan says the Red Raiders have to put a stop sign in Campbell's way if they hope to beat the nation's top-ranked team.

"Considering that we haven't tackled Campbell in two years, I'd say we're going to have our hands full," Sloan said of the important Southwest Conference game Saturday.

Campbell has been a dashing figure for three years in college football, but only once did he actually wreck the Red Raiders. That was in 1975, when his 150 rushing yards led a 53-15 Longhorns' rout.

But in 1974 and 1976, when Campbell had sub-par games, the Longhorns were losers.

This year, Campbell is en route to his best season, and the powerful Texas running back is coming off the biggest game of his career—a 212-yard performance against SMU.

While the 14th-ranked Red Raiders will be preparing for Campbell, Texas will be doing the same for Texas Tech quarterback Rodney Allison, even if he is a doubtful starter because of injury. Allison's brilliance in last year's game provided Texas Tech with a 31-28 victory.

"Rodney was a little better today," Sloan said Thursday of his star who has been sidelined with a broken leg since Sept. 16. "But he's still not anywhere near full speed. He's throwing pretty well, but he still doesn't run very well."

Along with Texas and Texas Tech, the rest of the Top Twenty teams will see action Saturday.

Second-ranked Alabama plays Mississippi State in a Southeastern Conference game at Jackson, Miss. The Crimson Tide is fresh off a 55-6 rout of Louisville.

Wisconsin makes its 18th try to win against third-ranked Ohio State in Ohio Stadium and Badgers Coach John Jardine wants to hear none of that "jinx" talk.

"I don't even like to talk about it because it takes away from what you're concentrating on," said Jardine.

The giant horseshoe stadium was built in 1922, four years after the Badgers last won at Columbus. Wisconsin is 0-18-2 playing in Ohio Stadium.

Three of the country's best linebackers will be on display when fourth-ranked Oklahoma, the only unbeaten team in Big Eight Conference action, plays at Kansas State.

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer suggests that Daryl Hunt and George Cumby might be the best pair the Sooners have ever had. Gary Spani of Kansas State has been closing out a four-year career in brilliant style. He is the second-leading tackler in the league behind Hunt.

Representatives from several bowl games will be on hand when fifth-ranked Notre Dame plays Navy at South Bend, Ind.. The Irish are coming off an impressive 49-19 victory over Southern California, and with their 5-1 record, rate a look by bowl scouts.

"We seem to play well against bigger teams, and what worries me about Navy is that they are smaller and quicker, well-coached and well-disciplined above all, tenacious," said Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine.

Berra, Cox, Aaron in running for job

ATLANTA (AP) — Officials of the Atlanta Braves want to talk with coaches Yogi Berra and Bobby Cox of the New York Yankees about managing the National League club.

And Hank Aaron, major league baseball's all-time home run king, says he will take the job if Braves owner Ted Turner asks him.

Bill Lucas, the Braves' director of player personnel, said Thursday he had asked Gabe Paul, Yankees general manager, for permission to approach Berra and Cox.

Approval of his request "should only be a formality," Lucas said.

But Lucas said, "There is no leading candidate" for the job, despite published reports that Berra, the former Yankees' AllStar catcher as well as manager of the Yankees and Mets, and Aaron were the frontrunners for the job.

In a telephone interview from Washington with The Atlanta Journal, Aaron said Thursday, "I haven't asked for the job, nor am I actively seeking it, but if Ted Turner wants me I'll do my best. I'd do it because of the love and respect I have for him."

He also spent two years with the Brewers in Milwaukee, a town that was the Braves' home during many of Aaron's best years, before rejoining Atlanta in a front office job as head of the Braves' farm system after the 1976 season.

Berra and Aaron reportedly are high on the list of possible replacements for Dave Bristol, who was fired Monday after two years as Braves manager.

Berra, 52, a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, said he hasn't heard from the Braves yet, but "I'm always willing to listen," adding, "I might want to manage again."

Berra took over the Mets in 1972 and managed them to a pennant in 1973, when they lost the World Series to Oakland in seven games. He was fired late in the 1975 season.

Injuries hit Tiger cagers

Kevin Williams, the Tigers' 6-10 freshman center from Nevada, Mo., suffered a bad ankle sprain the first day out and had the foot casted. He will be sidelined approximately three weeks.

Then senior guard Jeff Currie, who missed all of last season with a kidney ailment, suffered a slight break in a bone in his left hand when he was kneed in practice last Thursday. Currie has a light cast on the hand but he was able to resume practice Tuesday.

"It's a little unusual to have so many injuries of this type during the first week when you're just going over a lot of things," Stewart noted. "I wouldn't have been so surprised if they had come later when we are scrimmaging hard."

If nothing else, the tender limbs of veterans Currie, Drew and Droy have given the Tiger coaches a better look at the younger members of the squad -- particularly the 10 freshmen and sophomores.

Northeast provides stiff test for Indians in Homecoming meet

CAPE GIRARDEAU— Northeast Missouri State University football team, tied for tenth in the NCAA Division II poll, brings its 6-1 season mark to Houck Stadium Saturday for a 1:30 p.m. Homecoming contest against Southeast Missouri State University.

Both teams hold a 2-0 MIAA record, Northeast Missouri State having beaten Southwest Missouri State University 49-0, and Lincoln University 57-0, and SEMO State having defeated Central Missouri State University 40-28, and Northwest Missouri State University 16-0.

"They are a lot bigger, a lot stronger, and a lot faster than last year's team," noted SEMO State Head Coach Jim Lohr. "Their biggest plus is that they have played together. They have a year's more experience."

Another big plus for Northeast is senior running back Steve Powell, an honorable mention on the Associated Press Little All-American team in 1976.

Powell, a native of Kirkwood, is currently the NCAA Division II rushing leader, having gained 1086 yards in 150 carries for eight touchdowns. Powell is also the leading scorer in the conference with 54 points, four points ahead of SEMO State kicker Mike Wood.

Lohr, however, warned against any team keying its defense too heavily on the talented running back. "You can't make adjustments only for Powell because there are so many other ways they (the Bulldogs) can beat you."

Another way the Bulldogs can beat you is with passing. Quarterback Steve Rampy, a junior from Hannibal, has connected on 47 of 101 passes this season for 640 yards and nine touchdowns.

Rampy's favorite receiver is senior split end Lloyd Henry, of Waterloo, Iowa, who has caught 18 passes for 331 yards and six touchdowns. Like teammate Powell, Henry was an honorable mention in the AP Little All-American team last year.

In addition to an excellent offensive unit, which piled up a school record of 616 total offensive yards last week against Lincoln, the Bulldogs boast a defense that has limited opponents to 355 total yards an outingand 11.7 points per game.

Northeast's defense, which has not allowed a point to be scored against it the past two games, will be trying to stop two of the league's leading rushers in Jack Gokin and Bill White.

Gokin, a senior from St. Louis, has rushed for more than 100 yards in three of the last four games and is fourth in MIAA rushing with 583 yards in 99 carries and four touchdowns.

White, a freshman from Rock Hill, ranks sixth in conference rushing, having carried 69 times for 524 yards and five touchdowns.

The starting quarterback for the Indians will be Don Backfisch, a senior from Dexter. This season he has completed 32 of 77 passes for 380 yards and a touchdown.

"The team that wants it the most will be the winner," Lohr said. "We have to be enthused and utilize our quickness or we won't be able to win."

Mizzou gunning to snap Boulder winless streak

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Missouri hasn't whipped Colorado in the mountains since 1965, and just a month ago that string seemed a cinch to continue this year.

But how far the pendulum has swung.

Colorado roared away with a 5-0 mark the first five games of the season and was bidding for national honors. Missouri staggered to its worst start in years and was 1-5 by the time quarterback Pete Woods recovered from a season-opening knee injury.

But the Buffs haven't won in two weeks and they have lost two of their finest defensive players to injury and neartragedy.

First, linebacker Brian Cabral was cut down with injury. Then in a loss to Nebraska last week, Tom Perry, the big, talented senior linebacker who probably would have been a first-round draft choice, suffered a severe head injury.

But Missouri, with Woods passing for more than 450 yards in his two starts, came within four points of upsetting Oklahoma, and impressively downed Kansas State.

Other injuries which had helped deck the Tigers earlier have also abated with the return of tackle James Taylor and running back Earl Gant.

So Saturday, in a crucial Big Eight game for both teams, Missouri travels to Colorado in a game that most certainly will not be the rout that seemed ordained a month ago.

Elsewhere in the fourth week of Big Eight aclion, Oklahoma, the only team unbeaten in league play, is at Kansas State, Kansas goes to Iowa State and Oklahoma State hosts Nebraska.

The sellout crowd in Boulder, Colo., will see two of the finest passers in the country. Colorado's Jeff Knapple has thrown for 934 yards to lead the league. Woods, just coming into form after missing most of the first half of the season, has three splendid receivers in wideouts Joe Stewart and Leo Lewis and tight end Kellen Winslow. Stewart needs just five receptions to become Missouri's career leader. The wiry, acrobatic senior needs 198 yards to overttake Mel Gray's career yardage mark of 1,491.

"With Woods back in action, Missouri is a dangerous and capable football team," he said. "He makes all the difference in the world to them and he is throwing the ball really well right now. he's a winner and their leader, and they really seem confident now with him back in there."

Missouri, 2-5, is trying to salvage its season while the Buffs, 5-1-1, are trying to stay alive in the race for the Orange Bowl. Nobody can predict what effect Tom Perry's injury might have on the morale of the Colorado players. But Pete Woods' effect on the morale of his teammates has already been documented. The Tigers seem prime for one of their patented upsets: Missouri 27, Colorado 20.

Oklahoma and Kansas State have both been jelling. But the Sooners, 6-1 and 3-0, had such a head start on the Wildcats, 1-6, 0-3, that only a miracle could keep Kansas State from losing its 18th straight Big Eight game: Oklahoma 35, Kansas State 21.

Volleyballers in finals of LHS tourney

LILBOURN -- The Sikeston girls volleyball squad came one step closer to winning the Lilbourn Invitational Tournament as they defeated the top seeded host team. Their win came in dramatic style as they lost the first game 15-13 and came back to win the next games 16-14 and 15-11.

"It could have gone either way," said a pleased Coach Janie Merrick. Merrick also explained that, "a good, all-around team effort" was the key to the win.

Freshman Rochelle Patterson was another key in the victory as she served seven straight winners in the all-important second game.

The finals of the tourney will see the Aces face North Pemiscot, who advanced with a win over East Prairie. The match will be played at the Lilbourn High School gym at 7:30 p.m.

BOOK REVIEW

J.R.R. Tolkien needs no laudatory introduction.

Readers of the much admired "The Hobbit" and "The Lord Of The Rings" trilogy know what to expect of Tolkien, and he does not fail them in "The Silmarillion."

Tolkien left behind a number of unpublished materials on his death four years ago and five of them, edited by the late author's son, Christopher Tolkien, are included in this large volume: the lengthy book after which the volume is titled and four smaller works called "Ainulindale," "Valaquenta," "Akallabeth," and "Of The Rings Of Power And The Third Age."

All five works are related and deal with the events leading up to the creation of Tolkien's unique world, and some of the events that took place after its creation during the First Age. These events are alluded to in "The Hobbit" and the "Rings" books, which took place in the Third Age, but here are spun out at length.

"The Silmarillion" is the longest and most important of the narratives. Tolkien worked on it for more than 50 years, constantly changing and revising, and after his death it fell to his son to produce "the most coherent and internally self-consistent narrative."

In this he has succeeded very well. It is an epic story and tells of the creation of the three Silmarils — jewels made by the elf Feanor — and the chaos they touched off.

The jewels were coveted by the forces of evil, led by Melkor (later called Morgoth) and equally valued by the forces of good, and the desire to possess them resulted in a seemingly endless series of wars between the opposing sides. What went on during those heroic days makes for interesting reading.

Theatrical shop owner profits from Halloween

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The harvest moon of Halloween turns The Dancer's Shop into a ghoulish meeting place, where Benita Allen can transform the living into the living dead for $3 to $5.

Ms. Allen is manager of the shop, an ordinary looking place which for most of the year deals in leotards, dancing shoes and other show business paraphernalia.

But when the autumn moon is full and Halloween candy appears on supermarket shelves, Ms. Allen starts to work her bewitchery.

"It all began about three years ago, when we started carrying theatrical makeup," she said.

"We didn't realize how much makeup sold at Halloween. We were amazed. Last year it was so big that we realized how effective it was, really, so we decided this year to open a clinic," she said.

The "clinic" is a series of little seminars each night this week in which Ms. Allen and her sister, Jeanie Wilson, provide free instruction on an assortment of bizarre transformations.

The werewolf was Monday's exercise. It required about $3 worth of crepe hair, spirit gum and black makeup. Blond werewolves required applications of dark hair spray to keep from blowing their cover.

On Tuesday the sisters planned to produce dogs and ghosts. On Wednesday they were to teach youngsters how to use liquid latex to add about 70 years to their age. "Their faces will actually be wrinkled," Ms. Allen explained. "This one costs a little more — about $5."

Thursday's schedule gives the changelings a choice: a witch, a clown or a Martian. And finally on Friday, the ever-popular Dracula lives again ... and again and again.

All of the necessary materials are for sale at the shop, and there's no denying that the clinics will help move the merchandise. But there's clearly more to the service than profit, since the shop also sells a pullover gorilla mask that produces roughly the same effect as the werewolf makeup — for $18.

"I hope the idea catches on," said Ms. Allen. "The masks are really too bulky and the kids can't see out of them very well."

What's the law?

BY JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

While the early bird catches the worm, a whirly-bird caught Selma red-handed. Two unswerving narcotics agents, suspiscious that Selma was growing marijuana commandeered a helicopter to fly them over her property. And, while hovering about 20 to 25 feet above ground, they spotted her bumper crop of "grass" and, consequently, bumped indignant Selma right into court. She was charged with unlawfully cultivating a small field of marijuana.

"What's this country coming to," she protested to a judge. "I can't be convicted on evidence observed from a helicopter. Flying over my property without my permission was an unlawful search without a warrant."

"We didn't need any old warrant," responded the narcotics agents. "We neigher entered her property nor did we search it. All we did was fly over it."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold that "farmer" Selma was a victim of an unlawful search?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that when a helicopter is used to fly over a person's property for the specific purpose of uncovering illegal operations below, such helicopter activity constitues an unlawful search without a warrant.

Liverpool council votes against Beatle statue

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — A plan for a monument to the Beatles, who put this grimy port city on the map in the 1960s and dominated pop music for more than a decade, has met rebuff in their home town.

The City Council's General Services Committee voted 11-9 Wednesday night against erecting a monument to the four Liverpool natives.

"In my opinion they're not worthy of a place in our history," said city councillor Roy Stoddard, 59, in explaining his negative vote.

"They couldn't sing for toffee," said another city father, Tony McVeigh, who also cast a nay vote. "They ended up taking drugs and bringing discredit to the city."

The issue now goes to the full council, which numbers 99 including the lord mayor.

"How narrow-minded, how short-sighted, and how typically out of touch with what people think and feel," the Liverpool Echo commented in an editorial Thursday.

The newspaper rallied to the defense of the since-disbanded pop group "whose special talent is now indelibly written in the history of popular music" and accused the committee members of sitting in a "remote ivory tower."

"The councillors don't seem to realize just what a world phenomenon the Beatles are," commented Alan Williams, the group's first manager in Liverpool.

"There should be a complete museum and tourist industry in Liverpool, let alone a single monument.

"They'll be recognized as the greatest composers of this century. Many famous composers in history have been drug addicts, and even homosexuals, but that doesn't stop them from being honored as great artists."

John Chambers, 29, an unemployed ship's carpenter, is spearheading the plan to put up the monument to the four Beatles — John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr.

The head of an unofficial group of diehard Beatles fans, Chambers launched an appeal for $31,500 and is organizing a series of rock concerts to help raise the money. An anonymous London businessman has offered to start a fund with $875.

The plan was to erect a statue in a downtown shopping center a few hundred yards from the site of the Cavern Club, where the Beatles got their start in the early 1960s.

"It's a disgrace that there's virtually nothing in the city for the tourists coming here to see the places like the Cavern and Penny Lane," Chambers said.

Accountability project overlaps

WASHINGTON (AP) — At $7.50 a copy, it isn't going to be a best seller. Free, it wouldn't be a best seller.

That's because the Republican National Committee's promise-by-promise recital of what President Carter has and hasn't done is about as dramatic as a telephone directory.

Nonetheless, the GOP "presidential accountability project" has its moments. It lists campaign promises kept, broken and in five other categories. Sometimes they overlap.

Take the Republican assessment of Carter's promise to pursue budget and money supply policies so as to perk up the economy, "with some deficits if necessary, to reduce unemployment more rapidly."

According to the GOP scorekeeping system, this composite campaign pledge has been broken, kept and not kept, depending on which phase is under appraisal.

"Mr. Carter appears to have shown a little timidity here," the Republicans say, showing some themselves, since they can't decide whether that promise is broken, met or meaningless.

The GOP appraisal notes that Carter began by adding $19.4 billion to the projected deficit, but that cancellation of his proposed $50 tax rebate reduced that sum, and a lower-than-expected rate of government spending will reduce it still more.

The Republicans have cited some clear reversals of Carter's campaign pledges, notably his statements that he would not relinquish U.S. control of the Panama Canal, and that he favored deregulating the price of newly discovered natural gas.

They also contend that the tax provisions of his energy program break his promise not to increase taxes on lower- and middle-income Americans.

All of this goes on for 205 pages in a blue-bound Republican sequel to the list of Carter campaign promises prepared by the White House.

According to the Republicans, that list and others add up to 612 Carter campaign promises. By Republican accounting, he's kept 107 of them and broken 77. The rest are pending or impossible to classify at this point.

It seems a little early for a box score on an administration that has not yet presented such major elements of the Carter program as tax reform and national health insurance.

But the Republicans aren't resting on their dossier. They plan to keep it current, and probably will issue a new edition early in the 1978 congressional campaign year.

Copies of the GOP appraisal, called "Promises, Promises," have gone out to Republican members of Congress, GOP governors and members of the national committee. The party is advertising the book to its workers and donors at $7.50 a copy.

The kind of detailed scorekeeping the Republicans are attempting now is customarily reserved for presidential campaign years. But Michael E. Baroody, director of research for the Republican National Committee, said Carter will be an issue in 1978.

And by 1980, he said, the Republicans will have an exhaustive accounting of Carter's performance in office, ready for their candidates to use. "This is the beginning of that effort," he said.

The White House is not impressed.

David Rubenstein, who edited the compilation of Carter campaign pledges, said he hadn't seen the Republican catalogue.

"We haven't bothered to get a copy," he said. Nor is the White House trying to keep score against the promises list.

"It wasn't intended to be a checklist," Rubenstein said. He also said Carter never got around to reading the compilation.

Instead, when decision papers are prepared for the President, White House staff members dig out copies of Carter campaign speeches to provide a detailed account of his campaign pronouncements on the issue at hand.

Discontinued customers not to receive

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri Utilities Co. has won state approval to eliminate a requirement that it send required refunds to persons who have already discontinued their service.

The Missouri Public Service Commission agreed to modify its order for distribution of nearly $880,000 in refunds after the utility said it would cost $75,000 for it to comply with the provisions involving alreadydisconnected customers. The company said that additional administrative cost would reduce the amount of money available for refunds to all customers.

The company was originally ordered to send refunds due any former customer to that customer's last known address. The new provision requires the utility to advertise that the refunds are available, but the former customer would have to file a claim for the refund by Dec. 1.

The refunds result from a reduction in the price Missouri Utilities was charged for natural gas by its suppliers between 1970 and 1972 and 1975 and 1977. The reduction was ordered by the Federal Power Commission after an investigation into the wholesale price charged by the suppliers.

Current customers in the company's central Missouri and southeast Missouri service areas will receive their refunds as credits on their bills through December.

More 'readable' home insurance promised

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The director of the state Department of Consumer Affairs says thousands of homeowners across Missouri will soon be able to get more "readable" homeowners insurance policies.

Consumer affairs chief James Sullivan said Thursday a more readable policy had been needed so homeowners would be able to better "understand the benefits and limitations of their insurance protection."

The new homeowners' policy was filed by the Insurance Services Office of Missouri, a private group representing major insurance companies. There are about 200 member and subscriber companies in the organization, he said.

The policy would take effect Nov. 1 and already about 50 companies have completed the procedures necessary to use the policy, Sullivan explained.

Companies must ask to use the new policy, Sullivan noted. A total of about 300 companies write homeowners insurance in Missouri, he said.

The new policy would be available to about 40 per cent of the homeowners in the state, officials said.

A survey by the Insurance Division, in conjunction with a legislative committee, showed 80 per cent of the homeowners insurance policyholders understood "very little" or only "some" of the language in their homeowners policies, Sullivan added.

Dear Editor:

I commend the Daily Standard's editorial in Tuesday's edition which related to the petition of Mrs. O'Hair and her efforts to persuade the Federal Communications Commission to ban the broadcasting of religious programs. I believe Mrs. O'Hair has done enough harm through her successful efforts a few years ago which resulted in banning any Bible reading in the public schools. I hope enough people will write to the Federal Communications Commission of 1919 M. Street, Washington D.C. protesting the approval of the proposed regulation which would deny the privilege of broadcasting facilities from permitting religious broadcasts.

I think there may be much good from such broadcasts and, in my opinion, there 'sure as hell' a need to improve television programs.

I'M writing my letter to the commission, will you do likewise?

Sincerely,
C.D. Wright

APPLE APPEAL

NEW YORK (AP) — For centuries apples have been associated with Halloween celebrations.

"Maybe it's because apples ripen at Halloween time, and were sacred to the early Druids," says Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins. "They also figured in the Roman equivalent of Halloween, a festival honoring Pomona, the goddess of fruits."

The Halloween game of bobbing for apples or biting at apples suspended by a string originated generations ago in Ireland, Scotland and parts of England, according to Miss Hopkins. Sometimes a riskier variation was played by fixing an apple and a lighted candle at opposite ends of a suspended stick.

Missouri's restrictive blue law loss in sales tax and revenues

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri merchants in this border city have seen their customers drive across the state line in droves for 15 years of Sundays to go shopping in Kansas.

Officials say this has been costing Kansas City, Mo., more than $2 million a year in sales tax and other tax revenues. Neighboring Independence estimates it loses about $500,000 a year.

And all because of Missouri's blue law or legal restriction on Sunday sales, which Kansas kicked over in 1962.

For years, efforts have been made to get Missouri in on some of the Sunday action, but to no avail.

Now this could change. On Nov. 9, the voters of Clay, Jackson and Platte counties in Missouri will be able to vote to legalize sales of most merchandise on Sundays.

In 22 states, the blue law prohibits the sale of nonessential goods on Sundays. Only food and certain other goods designated necessities in the statutes can be sold, which forces most large department stores and speciality shops to close their doors on the last day of the weekend.

Designating certain items as necessities is dangerous business, the law's detractors say. Missouri's blue law, for example, allows the sale of guns and ammunition on Sundays but prohibits the sale of baby bottles, hoses and light bulbs.

Both states had similar blue laws until the early 1960s when the supreme courts of the two states ruled the laws void. Missouri responded by adopting a form of the blue law that complied with the supreme court ruling. But Kansas rejected repeated attempts in its legislature to re-enact any form of the law which it passed in 1861.

Before its ban on Sunday sales was ruled unconstitutional, Missouri had the law on its books for 138 years.

Last year, after repeated attempts by Kansas City-area legislators to repeal the law, the Missouri Legislature passed a bill allowing only the three counties in metropolitan Kansas City to vote on the proposal.

Growth of incorporated suburbs in both Missouri and Kansas has long been a sore point with Kansas City, Mo., officials. Right-to-work laws and legal Sunday sales in Kansas are said to have done much to entice shops and industry to the Sunflower State.

Most of the states bordering Missouri—including Arkansas, Illinois, Iowa and Kansas—allow Sunday sales, which makes enforcing the law particularly unpopular near Missouri borders.

At the other side of the state in St. Louis, the legal sale of merchandise on Sunday in western Illinois communities has created less of a stir. Illinois and Missouri are separated by the Mississippi River and access to Illinois stores is slightly more troublesome than access to Kansas stores at the other side of the state.

Until recently, St. Louis' major department stores and the strong retail clerks union had resisted attempts to allow Sunday sales. But the department stores agreed in 1975 not to fight repeal of the blue law, even though they did not agree to support Sunday sales.

State legislators from the St. Louis area have traditionally been reluctant to throw their support behind repeal of the blue law, and fought attempts to include the St. Louis area counties in the recently-passed measure.

Lobby groups traditionally favoring the ban on Sunday sales have included automobile dealers, small retailers, the retail clerks union and Christian organizations. Their reasons vary from not wanting to be forced to work on a Sunday to preserving a day of rest.

State Rep. Phillip Scaglia, DKansas City, has led a crusade against the blue law in Missouri since he began his first term in the House 12 years ago. Until last year, his efforts were unsuccessful; it was 1976 before his blue law repeal bills even made it to the floor of the House for debate.

During 1977, he went on the offensive with a push for strict enforcement of the law. He and his workers purchased goods in several Missouri counties on Sundays and took the evidence to local prosecuting attorneys demanding that charges be filed against the stores selling the goods.

The battle plan was intended to create a political climate where Missourians would ask their legislators to repeal the law. The plan worked to the extent that the Missouri General Assembly acquiesced to a repeal referendum for the Kansas City area counties only.

Many blue law advocates in the Bible Belt believe allowing Sunday sales will result in partial abandonment of the family unit's time together on Sundays.

And they'll be buying and paying sales tax in Kansas City and Missouri rather than Kansas, he added.

Teen life follows art

'American Graffiti' lives in Medford

By Murray Olderman

MEDFORD, Ore. — (NEA) — Saturday night in this southern Oregon lumber center should convince anyone that the whole world is aged 15 to 25.

Or at least that's the way it looks on Central Avenue once dusk settles over the Rogue River country and the neon lights go on to announce beauty shops, vacuum cleaners, hardware and pizza.

By 8 p.m., the traffic is bumper to bumper where Main crosses Central. It has been going on like this for five years, the guy at the Shell Station tells me. And maybe you can blame George Lucas and the film "American Graffiti" — for that signalled the revival of cruising in Medford and Modesto and Walla Walla and maybe 1,000 other small cities in America.

The kids really get brazen, too. Even a middle-aged intruder in nondescript slacks and sneakers is flattered when the blonde in the Camaro shouts as she zips by, "Hey, you're good looking."

In the corner window of Monte's Shoe Store, facing the intersection of Central and Main, Jerry Allen, a local disk jockey for station KYCZ is winding down toward the final hours of a muscular dystrophy marathon broadcast. He's gone without sleep for four straight days, and a young brunette standing behind him massages his shoulders to ease the fatigue.

Half a block down the street, at the Craterion Theater, "Star Wars" is the feature attraction and, miracle of miracles, the line doesn't even extend around the corner. For city folks, it's a perfect time to catch Lucas' latest cinema opus. And, while standing in the modest line for the 9 o'clock show, still watch the motorized parade down Central Avenue.

There's a steady var-r-r-oom of four-wheel drive pickups, jeeps, Camaros, Mustangs, Darts and even one big Mack truck — without the van. They're piloted by boys and girls in flowing hair (both boys and girls). There's no mingling. Boys are with boys as passengers; girls are with girls.

This makes us question Patty and Joannie, who are standing behind us in line, about the phenomenon of unisex. Patty and Joannie are high school freshmen (freshpersons?). Patty confesses that she has seen the movie four times so far because "it's neat."

There's a steady var-r-room of four-wheel pickups, jeeps, Camaros, Mustangs, Darts and even one big Mack truck — without the van. They're piloted by boys and girls in flowing hair. There's no mingling. Boys are with boys as passengers; girls are with girls.

How come they don't have dates? Where are the guys?

In front of us are a couple of husky, handsome high school seniors who are also standing in line for the show. Why aren't they cruising?

"Plenty of time for that," scoffs Hank. "It doesn't really get heavy till after the movie lets out. We don't start till midnight."

Thirteen miles down the road from Medford is picturesque Ashland, where a Shakespeare festival reigns all summer and where there isn't a single motel room available.

Patty and Joannie know all about it, but they've never been. "That's for tourists," says Patty. "By the way, what are you guys doing here?"

No motel reservation, it is explained. And no ticket to the Shakespeare Theater. So we had to track all the way to the big city of Medford (population, 28,000) to bunk down at the Red Lion Motel, which had a sunken tub in the room at the princely price of 30 bucks a night and a terrific buffet in the restaurant for dinner — roast beef, fried chicken, spare ribs, with salad bar and dessert, all you can eat, for $5.75 a head.

It's only a short walk to all the action at the intersection of Central and Main. There's only one disconcerting note on this Saturday night in Oregon.

While all the young people are chasing frenetically up and down the boulevards, across the street from where Jerry Allen is broadcasting in the shoe store, in the United Bank building, on the second floor, there's a light on in the office.

A young guy in his 20s, sleeves rolled up, is at a desk. You can see him clearly through the open window. His head doesn't raise once as the little world around him cruises by in that strange, aimless pattern of kids passing time.

The young guy is actually working.

First Christian to host World Vision musical team

The Sounds of Praise musical team will present a public concert at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in First Christian Church, 1006 N. Main St.

As representatives of World Vision International, The Sounds of Praise will include in their concert a penetrating look at world needs. They will also report on the help that has been given to thousands of needy people through the ministries of World Vision.

The group is made up of two couples: Bob and Kathy Hobbs and Les and Mary Kline.

Hobbs has served as choir and music director in churches in Michigan and Illinois. Prior to joining World Vision, he was a member of the Oak Park River Forest Symphony of Chicago and also played with the Spurlows.

Kline is also an experienced trumpeter and singer. A graduate of John Brown University at Siloam Springs, Ark., with a full music scholarship, Kline was a member of the Sound Generation and has served as musical director in churches in Florida.

Included in their concerts is a wide variety of vocal and instrumental selections. They remain in high demand throughout the Midwest.

The Sounds of Praise share World Vision's story at church services, banquets, fellowship gatherings and retreats. The nonprofit Christian humanitarian agency has programs of child care, emergency relief, development, evangelism and leadership training throughout the world. The organization currently sponsors over 110,000 needy children in more than 40 countries.

David Wilkerson to speak in Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU— The author of "The Cross and the Switchblade", the Rev. David Wilkerson, will speak at the Arena Building Nov. 7 at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Mr. Wilkerson's first book, the best-seller book was a personal account of his first efforts to reach and rehabilitate street gang members during the era of the gang wars of the late 1950s and early 1960s. The book, first published in 1962, is in its 28th printing, has been translated into 42 languages, and has passed the 16-million mark in sales. It also was made into a feature-length movie in 1970, with Pat Boone playing the part of David Wilkerson.

The Rev. Mr. Wilkerson's book details the formation of the organization called Teen Challenge which in the past decade has become one of the most successful in the world for the rehabilitation of drug addicts. Teen Challenge now has facilities in over 50 cities in the United States (including Mid-America Teen Challenge Training Center here) and a documented cure rate of 74 per cent.

notorious Mau Maus. Cruz was known as one of the most feared and hated street fighters in New York. When the Rev. Mr. Wilkerson first approached Cruz, he spit on him, slapped him across the face and told him to "go to hell." Cruz later became a Wilkerson convert and one of his most trusted assistants.

The Rev. Mr. Wilkerson now spends the majority of his time speaking to teen-agers about drugs, sex, alcohol, rebellion and other subjects of current interest. He also has written several more books.

Revival crusade to open tonight

Evangelists Donald and Vallie Honeycutt will conduct a series of revival services opening tonight and continuing indefinitely at a building located at 317 S. Main St. which formerly housed a western store, the Rev. Mr. Honeycutt announced this week.

The services will begin at 7:30 each evening, and will feature country gospel music by both the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Honeycutt. The Rev. Mr. Honeycutt plays the harmonica and guitar at the same time as well as sings, and has written numerous gospel songs.

A native of Dunn, N.C., the Rev. Mr. Honeycutt has been a Christian only eight years, and admits to having a wild and rocky past prior to his conversion after coming to what he terms "the end of my road." Feeling called into the ministry by the Lord shortly after his conversion, he joined his wife who has been an ordained minister for 20 years.

The Honeycutts adhere to a deeper life ministry and say they believe they were led by God to conduct revival services through their friendship and association with Mr. and Mrs. James W. Lee, 526 Malcolm St., whom they have known for some time.

The composer of a variety of songs, the Rev. Mr. Honeycutt has produced an album with the help of the Christian Toubadours and Nashville Sound.

U.S. church leaders condemn restrictions in South Africa

NEW YORK (AP) — American church leaders this week widely condemned the new restrictions imposed on blacks and their white sympathizers in South Africa and said it would heighten resentments, threatening worsened conflict.

"My worst fears are being fulfilled," said the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the Luthern Church in America, noting that he recently visited in South Africa, and saw potentialities then for spreading "police state" rule.

It was bound to happen unless blacks were given greater freedom and a part in government, he said, and it now is occurring with the new "horribly confining restraints."

The trend "could confront the world with a crisis like that of 40 years ago in Europe" under the oppression of Nazism, he added.

He and other church leaders voiced support for President Carter's criticism of the new oppressive acts, and urged backing for U.S. steps to try to get the decrees reversed.

The Rev. Avery D. Post, president of the United Church of Christ, called for economic sanctions, and noted that his church has urged withdrawal of U.S. businesses investments from South Africa.

He said that "for the sake of the God of justice ... the United States must not remain quiescent in the face of the ruthless denials of justice" applied to blacks and white leaders working for racial justice.

Baptists delay action on grant program

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Delegates to the Missouri Baptist Convention meeting in Springfield Tuesday deferred until next year a proposal to withdraw from a state grants program because of Missouri requirements banning religious discrimination.

The proposal would have resulted in Baptist affiliated colleges ending participation in the Missouri Public Assistance Grants Program by 1981.

By a 589-379 standing vote, the delegates adopted a measure proposed by the Rev. F.R. Cole of Raytown, calling for further study of "the unanswered questions concerning the broad implications of governmental assistance or subsidization of Missouri Baptist agencies, institutions, churches and individuals.

He succeeds Milton Morales of Independence.

Swadley has spent 23 years as a minister including the past seven and a half in Springfield. He attended Southwest Baptist College in Bolivar and was graduated from Southwest Missouri State University and Midwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Kansas City.

The committee's concern centered on the Missouri Student Grant Program, which requires non-discrimination in hiring.

THE NEW TESTAMENT
No. 23. Jesus Charges Peter

When Jesus came to Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples what the people there had said about his identity. They replied that some called him Elijah, some John the Baptist, some Jeremiah, and others called him one of the other prophets.

"He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." (Matthew 16:15-16)

"And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter; and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven." Rise in worker productivity found

WASHINGTON (AP) — The productivity of American workers rose at an annual rate of 4.9 per cent in the third quarter, following a 1.1 per cent decline in the second three months of the year, the Labor Department reported

Productivity is the amount of output per hour worked and is an important measure of efficiency in the economy

Rising productivity leads to higher real wages and lessened inflation because more output comes from the same amount of time worked.

The government said the productivity growth in the third quarter reflected a 4 per cent increase in output and an eighttenths per cent decline in hours worked.

Although the third-quarter rate of output was less than half the 8.5 per cent rate in the second quarter, it was accomplished with little increase in hiring coupled with a slight decline in hours worked, resulting in the growth in the productivity.

Workers gained significantly in buying power in the third quarter, the government said, as "real" hourly compensation in the private economy rose 3 per cent. This "real" hourly compensation, which is hourly pay adjusted for inflation, declined 2.2 per cent in the second three months of the year.

Compensation per hour rose at an 8.4 per cent annual rate in the third quarter, compared with a 6.3 per cent increase in the pcevious quarter.

The productivity gains, however, lessened the impact of rising wages on unit labor costs, which rose at a 3.3 per cent annual rate in the JulySeptember period. It was the smallest such increase since the third quarter of 1975.

Film world not interesting

CAIRO (AP) — Michael York, the country bumpkin fencing ace in "Three Musketeers" and the peripatetic legionnaire in "The Last Remake of Beau Geste," says he's rediscovering television.

"The film world is not in a really interesting state. The big studios are not doing the best work. Some of the best films are coming from a young group of (director Francis Ford) Coppola disciples," said York, who was in Cairo recently for an international film festival.

York, a boyish-looking, tan, blond 35, said he had just turned down a terrorist role in an upcoming movie.

"Dangerous," the British actor said over croissants and tea as he watched a string of barges glide up the Nile.

"It's too dangerous. The terrorist was the hero, and I felt that was reprehensible.

"It's a very dangerous point. I think that one's work, if it's going to be good, has to be embelished by a kind of truth and realism that only comes from being totally in accord with it. There's something about urban guerrillas that sticks in my gut."

York's next project is a magic act in an upcoming CBS TV program called "Secular Circus." He'll follow that with a radio play called "The Dark Tower" with the All-Media Dramatic Workshop in Chicago.

He's never done radio drama before. "That's why I wanted to do it, especially this play which was written for radio.

"The one thing I hate is being restricted, which is something that happens in our business. People push you into a pigeonhole."

York is doing his best not to be pigeonholed. After a series of big-name, big-money movies — "Cabaret" with Liza Minnelli, "Murder on the Orient Express" with Albert Finney and Lauren Bacall — he is turning back to the small screen.

"I've suddenly rediscovered television. I've done several things for the BBC recently, the kind of things you can't do in film," York said.

Despite all his projects in Britain, York last year joined the growing number of English actors who have opted to live abroad to escape the exorbitant income tax at home. York said taxes took 94 per cent of his income during his last year in Britain.

York and his wife, Pat, a freelance photographer who was sent to photograph the actor in 1967 and married him in 1968, now live in Monaco.

Though an erupting volcano brings to mind pictures of flowing rivers of boiling lava, not all active volcanoes emit lava. Mount Taal in the Philippines, with a history of death and destruction, has spewed forth noxious gases, steaming mud and ash and white-hot rocks—but never lava.

State farm organizations support strengthing laws

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The state's major farm organizations support strengthening state laws to prevent a recurrence of problems like those resulting from the collapse of the Progressive Farmers Association, a top official of the Missouri Farmers Association said today.

Alfred Hoffman, vice president and general counsel for MFA, said his organization, Farmland Industries and the Missouri Farm Bureau had conferred with Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick's office on strengthening the laws to prevent a recurrence of problems like those associated with the collapse of the PFA.

PFA went bankrupt several months ago leaving several thousand Missourians with million of dollars in virtually worthless securities.

The House Civil and Criminal Justice Committee is holding a series of hearings to try to update state laws to prevent another PFA affair.

Kirkpatrick has recommended a series of revisions to help prevent another PFA.

Hoffman said the recomendations had been worked out by atttorneys for the three major farm organizations and Kirkpatrick's office.

Among those suggestions was one which would require securities salesmen to supply the secretary of state with adequate information on their activities, Hoffman said.

Such information would enable the secretary of state to determine if the salesmen were actually representing a true farm cooperative, he said.

In addition, he said Kirkpatrick would have the authority to stop the sale of securities in farm cooperatives if he determined the organizations were not actually true cooperatives.

Kirkpatrick and Attorney General John Ashcroft had testified at the committee's hearing Wednesday, with both officials calling for stronger laws.

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON – (NEA) – After years of embarrassing disclosures about illegal payments of millions of dollars by American corporations to politicians and government officials in other nations, Congress is about to pass a law prohibiting the practice in the future.

The legislation offered to the Senate, however, contains a little-noticed loophole that not only will allow international bribery to continue but will endow the practice with the federal government's seal of approval.

Because many of the nation's largest companies have falsified their financial records to conceal such corruption in the past, the bill establishes stringent new accounting and reporting requirements for publicly-owned corporations under the jurisdiction of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

But the measure also includes a crucial exemption that waives the reporting requirements for "any person acting in cooperation with, and at the specific, written directive of the head of any federal agency or department responsible for matters concerning the national security of the United States."

In plain language, that provision exempts international political bribes undertaken at the request or with the cooperation of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) or other intelligence organizations within the government.

The special waiver was inserted in the bill by Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., when the Senate Banking Committee was drafting the legislation earlier this year. The bill was routinely approved by the full Senate last spring.

While tracking down the history of the obscure provision, Fielding M. McGehee III, an official of a public interest group called the Military Audit Project, discovered that there was no testimony during the public hearings on its effects or genesis, no debate by the committee, no recorded vote and no discussion on the Senate floor.

The House version of the bill, drafted by a subcommittee headed by Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., recently was approved by the House Commerce Committee and now awaits action by the full House.

Eckhardt's bill contains no exemption for intelligence-related bribery. "We never focused on that, it just never came up," says an aide to the congressman. But other sources say Eckhardt specifically parried the intelligence community's efforts to write the provision into the bill.

The Senate version is objectionable for several reasons, not the least of which is its effect of placing the federal government in the position of a parent who forbids a child from doing something because it's wrong, but insists that it's perfectly appropriate for mother or father to do it.

The exemption also leaves executives and employees of American corporations stationed abroad under a continuing cloud – both as CIA operatives and as paymasters of illegal funds.

There have, in fact, been numerous reports in recent years that the CIA was aware of, encouraged and possibly even provided the funds for corporate bribery in the past.

Questions have been raised by about $7 million paid by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. to an intermediary in Japan; about commissions paid by the Boeing Co. to its "agents" in Iran, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia; and about almost $8.3 million transferred overseas by Deak & Co., a New York-based firm that deals in international currency transactions.

One knowledgeable official on Capitol Hill suggests that "some people in the Senate don't want to totally hamstring the CIA, if that indeed is their modus operandi."

If the CIA must resort to bribery and must rely on corporate "cutouts" to obscure the source of the money, let there be no sanctimonious self-congratulation from Washington's politicians if the final version of the "reform" legislation contains a mult-million-dollar loophole.

1. In Memoriam

In Memory of Dennis C. Evans who passed away this day - Oct. 30, 1974.
Three years ago since that sad day,
Death claimed you darling and took you away,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
Little do they realize the hurt our hearts conceals.
More and more we miss you,
With the passing of each day,
Home is oh, so empty, since you have gone away.
We think of you in silence, few ever see us weep,
But many a tear we shed while others lay asleep
Never shall you be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade,
Loving thoughts will always linger,
Round the grave where you were laid.
Sadly missed by wife and family.

A Third Of The Homes We Foam Already Have Fiberglass Insulation

So why add foam? Very simply because foam insulates at least three times better than fiberglass, and can greatly reduce heat loss... even in a previously insulated home. The fluidity of foam also serves to fill all the voids around plumbing, and behind electrical fixtures. It really seals out unwanted outdoor temperatures, winter and summer, and gives you the most comfort for the least fuel cost. Foam can be applied to any structure at any time. So call now for a free estimate and inspection.

No fault insurance succeeds in repaying accident victims

EDITOR'S NOTE: Congress is considering a bill to require every state to implement nofault auto insurance meeting minimum federal standards. Sixteen states already have some sort of no-fault program. But no-fault is NOT without faults. Here, in the first of a two-part series on auto insurance, is a look at how it's working.

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

No-fault auto insurance, once promoted as a means of cutting costs for consumers, has failed to stem the tide of soaring premiums, but authorities say it has succeeded in its main goal of getting benefits into the hands of accident victims more quickly.

"We consider it a smashing success," said William Sheppard, Pennsylvania insurance commissioner, when asked about his state's no-fault program which took effect July 19, 1975.

"It has accomplished everything we said it would accomplish," said Jack Davies, a Minnesota state senator who sponsored a no-fault plan that began Jan. 1, 1975.

"No-fault is working well," said Kentucky Insurance Commissioner Harold McGuffey. "It's doing the job it's supposed to do — paying more people more money and arranging quick settlements. We have had practically no complaints."

At the same time, however, the drive for no-fault at the state level has stalled. Several states which passed no-fault laws early in the 1970s have been forced to make major changes.

President Carter has endorsed the concept of a federal no-fault bill, but the measures have not gotten beyond the hearing stage.

Premiums, meanwhile, are going up. And up. They increased almost 50 per cent from August 1975 to August 1977.

If no-fault is working so well, why haven't more states passed no-fault laws? What went wrong with the existing ones? Why the delay in passing a federal law? And why are prices rising?

The concept behind no-fault is simple: each party in an accident is compensated, for medical expenses at least, by his own insurance company. An individual's right to sue for further damages is limited. Expensive court cases and lengthy delays are eliminated.

Massachusetts became the first state in the nation to enact a no-fault law. The plan took effect Jan. 1, 1971. Since then, 15 other states have passed nofault laws. They are: Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Pennsylvania and Utah. The most recent law — North Dakota's — took effect on Jan. 1, 1976.

(Eight other states passed laws that were described as nofault, but they place no limitation on the right of an accident victim to sue and cannot really be counted as part of the nofault system.)

One reason for the problems with no-fault is a lack of understanding about what it can and cannot do.

No-fault supporters themselves may be partly to blame for the confusion. Ron Arnold of State Farm Insurance Cos., the nation's biggest auto insurer, said that politicians, eager to get support for the concept, appealed to people's pocketbooks. They promised — mistakenly — that no-fault would lower premiums and, in some cases, ordered rate decreases when no-fault went into effect.

Some state officials concede privately that the money-saving claims were a come-on and not realistic. They say now that the advantages of no-fault are not monetary.

There are several reasons for the lack of cost saving. No-fault generally applies only to bodily injury. Property damage stays under the old system — the insurance company of the motorist at fault has to pay. And property damage, according to State Farm, accounts for 60 cents of every dollar you pay in premiums on a nationwide basis.

James Hunt, director of the State Rating Bureau in Massachusetts, said bodily injury rates dropped 45 per cent from 1970 to 1976. Without no-fault, he said, they would have increased 63 per cent.

"The real proof of our success with no-fault is the steady reduction in bodily injury insurance rates," said Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, who, as a legislator, was a major sponsor of the state's no-fault law. "Unfortunately, the rate reductions for bodily injury have been counter-balanced by rates for other coverages which have gone up about as fast as bodily injury rates have come down."

Other officials said the rate increases would have been even worse without no-fault. Dr. James C. Nicholas, staff director of an ad hoc Automobile Insurance Commission in Florida, said that the cost of commercial vehicle insurance — which remained under the conventional system — has risen 130 per cent since 1971. Auto insurance, under no-fault, has risen 100 per cent in the same period.

State Farm said a survey showed that the average increase in automobile insurance rates in the 16 no-fault states from Dec. 31, 1970 through the end oflast year was 24.6 per cent, compared to a nationwide average boost of 27.7 per cent.

Authorities also say that while no-fault has eliminated some of the legal costs surrounding accidents, the savings has been offset by the fact that more people are getting benefits since they are automatically paid by their own companies.

A Department of Transportation study showed that in Connecticut, an estimated 25 per cent more accident victims recover economic losses under no-fault than under the traditional system.

"With this no-fault system, people no longer have to worry abut beggaring themselves to pay for their injuries," said Milton Friedman, counsel to the New York State Insurance Department. "And people in single-car accidents — who never got anything under the old law — are also being compensated."

Gene Glascock, supervising analyst for the Colorado Insurance Division, said no-fault "has reallocated funds, putting the funds in the hands of the injured rather than in the hands of the attorneys handling court cases. It hasn't really altered the cost to the insuring company."

One problem with existing nofault programs, say officials, is that it is still too easy to sue. The laws generally allow a person to go to court after medical expenses reach a certain threshold. In nine states, the threshold is $750 or less. In New Jersey, it is only $200.

"I would guess that with continued inflation we would have to look at ... the threshold," said a spokesman for the Insurance Department in North Dakota, where a victim with medical expenses exceeding $1,000 is allowed to sue. "With the increased cost of medical services ... the $1,000 figure might not be realistic any more," he added.

State Insurance Commissioner Dick Rottman of Nevada, which has a $750 threshold, said: "It doesn't seem to be much of a problem for a person to sue, even if injured only slightly."

To correct the problem, authorities are considering raising the dollar threshold or eliminating it completely as New York and Florida have done recently and replacing it with a requirement that generally prohibits suits unless the accident results in death or serious injury.

(Michigan is the only other state without a dollar threshold; it is one of only three states — New Jersey and Pennsylvania are the others — which puts no ceiling on the amount of medical expenses that can be collected. Legislation under consideration in Pennsylvania would limit basic medical coverage to $100,000, with companies required to offer a maximum of $250,000 to customers who wanted the extra protection. The proposed federal legislation would allow states to put a limit of $250,000 on benefits for medical expenses and would permit individual suits only in case of death or serious injury.)

Fault or no-fault, there may be some relief from rising costs. The frequency of claims — a key factor in determining rates — has declined, although no one is sure why.

Auto insurance companies, many of which lost money during several periods in 1976, have reported enormous profits. They have not filed for rate reductions, but say the increased earnings may help offset future increases.

"We don't anticipate nearly the rapid rise in rates" of the past two or three years, said a spokesman for State Farm. He said State Farm increases on a nationwide average have been ranging from 12 to 15 per cent in recent years; this year, he said, the average increase will be 6 to 7 per cent.

The Consumer Price Index shows that auto insurance prices went up 12.5 per cent from August 1976 to August 1977. That compares with an increase of 31.2 per cent in the preceding year.

Social Security tax hike wins House approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation that would put an unprecedented tax bite on the 104 million Americans who have Social Security taxes withheld from their pay checks is heading to the Senate after winning House approval.

A Senate vote on a similar bill could come as early as next week.

On Thursday, the House passed, 275 to 146, its version of legislation increasing the tax for every worker covered by the program, with the heaviest impact falling on upper-income workers. Their employers would also pay more under the House bill.

A decade from now, anyone earning $42,600 would pay over three times as much Social Security tax as is now withheld. The tax would go from $965 this year to $3,025 in 1987.

Someone earning $20,000 would pay $1,420, instead of $965. A worker with a salary of $10,000 would pay $710, up from $585.

Congress will probably enact hefty tax increases this year to keep the Social Security system from going broke. The system has amassed $5.6 billion in deficits since 1975.

Because of population age shifts and such other factors as high unemployment, less money is being taken in by Social Security than it is paying out in benefits.

"We are concerned about keeping the system solvent and this bill will do it," Rep. Al Ullman, D-Ore., said after the House approved the bill produced by the ways and means committee, which he heads.

Although some members complained about the major tax increase, most agreed that the financial crisis was severe enough to merit the drastic steps.

However, the House added two amendments that increased the tax rate beyond what the committee called for.

One amendment would remove limits on wages earned by Social Security recipients, phasing out the current maximum of $3,000 on outside earnings by 1982.

Under current law, recipients lose $1 in benefits for every $2 they take in above that amount.

Elderly persons could therefore continue to receive a full salary while drawing full Social Security benefits.

The second amendment, approved earlier, continues an exemption for more than 6 million public employes and congressmen, who have separate retirement plans.

The House did not consider any change in the benefits Social Security pays to 33 million people akreadt receiving benefits.

The House-approved bill would also allow recipients to continue receiving benefits even after marrying. Some elderly couples now live together without marrying because they would otherwise lose benefits.

Under the pending Senate bill, employers would for the first time pay more than their employes.

The Social Security tax is now 5.85 per cent of wages, with workers earning $16,500 paying the maximum of $965.

Power plant will effect housing and city budget

The influx of employes needed to build the 235-megawatt power plant for Sikeston will have an impact not only on the city's economy, but also on the city's budget, City Manager Charles Church told the Sikeston Area Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

The chamber met for a noon luncheon at Patti Todd's Supper Club.

A study done by the power plant project engingeers, Phelps & Hogland, shows the influx of workers will not have as great an effect on housing as orginally expected, Church said.

The study shows about 20 per cent of the workers, or 75 families, will need trailers, and 30 per cent or 112 workers, will room in Sikeston on weekdays and commute to their homes on weekends.

Of the remaining 50 per cent, 20 per cent will be roomers 10 per cent will rent homes and 20 per cent will commute to the city.

Higher rents and land values will come with the increasing number of workers.

Church said the City Council will be under considerable pressure to amend city codes to allow for more development of apartment complexes and trailer parks.

If the city is not careful, the entire character of Sikeston could change, Church said.

If developers cannot have their way inside the city, they may move outside the city limits. That will require the implementation of county planning and zoning for land near Sikeston, Church said.

Other public organizations such as the schools and medical facilities will have considerable pressure put on them, Church added.

The Public Safety Department will also be under . strain, he remarked. The city has reduced the number of officers by four in order to balance the budget and it is difficult even now for the department to keep up with the work load, he added.

Church said studies have shown that a growth rate of 10 per cent over several years results in degradation of enviornment.

The long-range benefits to the city from the power plant are tremendous, Church said, but the city needs to anticipate the problems in order to handle them.

Church said one of the problems with the influx of new workers is that they will be using city services without paying city taxes.

In response to a question, Church said that a one per cent sales tax would offset some of the impact and enable those workers to share some of the costs.

Ken Williams a representative of the Sikeston Production Credit Association, reminded chamber members of the Farmers Appreciation Banquet at 6:30 p.m. Nov. 17 in the National Guard Armory.

Sixteen farm families from Scott, Stoddard, Mississippi and New Madrid counties, will be honored at the banquet.

Bill Wellborn, executive vice president of the chamber, said that 33 new members have joined the chamber so far this nomth. He said he expects to see a total of 50 by the time the membership

Embargo against South Africa given U.S., European support

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The United States and its Western allies on the U.N. Security Council have agreed to back an arms embargo against South Africa, but some Third World countries say they want tougher action.

African delegates are unhappy with the Western proposal because it provides only for a six-month embargo, which could be renewed, and because it includes no economic restrictions.

The Africans were trying to decide today whether to back the plan anyway or to press for changes. Any such sanctions against South Africa must be approved by the Security Council where a vote is not expected until Saturday or Monday.

President Carter said Thursday the United States would support a mandatory embargo on arms sales to South Africa's white minority government to demonstrate displeasure with its policies of racial segregation.

A mandatory embargo, if approved by the Security Council, would be binding on United Nations members.

In South Africa, Foreign Minister Roelof Botha accused the United States of being unfair and urged American leaders to reconsider their policy.

"It is quite obvious that we are being singled out for special treatment, not because of the reasons mentioned by the president but because of the demands of a number of countries who have actively conducted a vendetta against us for some years now," Botha said.

"If the maintenance of human rights was indeed the concern of the American government, then certainly America should be pressing for sanctions against more than half of the governments of the nations of the world," he added.

Defense Minister Pieter Botha acknowledged that American support of the U.N. resolution would affect his country, but said: "We will survive President Carter."

The United States, Britain, France, West Germany and Canada, the Western nations on the Security Council, reached final agreement on a joint embargo proposal Thursday.

The United States has been abiding by a voluntary arms embargo decreed by the United Nations in 1963, but the Western powers vetoed a Security Council proposal for a binding embargo in 1975.

Black African states have been calling for tougher international sanctions against South Africa for 14 years. Last week they renewed their demand for a mandatory embargo after South Africa arrested dozens of black dissidents, outlawed most major black organizations and closed two blackoriented newspapers.

The African group also sought a resolution calling for a halt to new investment in South Africa. But the only economic items in the Western proposal, sources said, are provisions calling on governments to review their economic relations with South Africa and to establish codes of conduct for foreign companies operating there.

Stringent economic sanctions could damage investments by American firms in South Africa, which in 1974 totaled about $1.5 billion. British investment, estimated at $2.2 billion, also would suffer.

2 pedestrians hurt on roads

A driver of one car was injured moderately and two pedestrians received minor injuries in separate accidents Thursday on area roads.

Fog was blamed for a one car accident at 7:45 a.m. on Highway 177, eight miles north of Cape Girardeau.

Injured was the driver of a southbound car, Hermina A. Westrich, 44, of Cape Girardeau, who was taken to the St. Francis Medical Center in Cape Girardeau with moderate injuries.

The highway patrol reported that the accident occured as the Westrich woman came to a stop sign at the junctions of Route V and Highway 177, was unable to see the stop sign due to the fog, and slid through the intersection and struck a dirt embankment.

A pedestrian, Paul Arthur Bartholomew, 22, of Gideon, received minor injuries when struck by a car driven by his wife, Judith Ann Bartholomew, 16.

The patrol said Mrs. Bartholomew was driving west on Highway 162 in Gideon at 12:05 p.m. when her husband stepped on to the side of the road to wave her down and was struck.

Bartholomew was taken to theDunklin County Memorial Hospital in Kennett.

John William Stockwell, 49, of Poplar Bluff a pedestrian received minor injuries at 6:50 p.m. Thursday on Highway 60, four miles east of Poplar Bluff.

Stockwell was taken to the Veterans Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Oran will dedicate bell

ORAN -- The Oran Bicentennial Committee will dedicate the old public grade school bell as a permanent display and lasting memorial to the nation's 200th birthday in ceremonies to be held at 2 p.m. Nov. 13 in Triangle Park.

The dedication will culminate efforts that began in February 1975 and will also include the burying of capsules containing various items concerning the Bicentennial as well as articles used in the celebration of Oran's 1969 Centennial celebration.

The capsules will be buried in a permanent vault next to the gazebo which will house the bell.

The bell was purchased and placed in the Oran public school building in 1896, and remained there until the building was demolished in 1972.

The time change occurs at 2 a.m., Sunday but most people turn the clock back before going to bed Saturday night.

Economy coming out of summer doldrums

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government said today its index that gives clues about the economy's future rose in September for the third straight month, a further sign the economy is coming out of its summer slowdown.

The increase in the index of leading indicators last month was a moderate three-tenths of 1 per cent. However, revised figures showed the August index rising 1.4 per cent, one of the largest monthly jumps in the past two years.

The nation's economic growth had slowed in the third quarter after a strong performance in the first half of the year, but the new figures indicated some improvement ahead in the fall.

President Carter is waiting to see how the economy looks before deciding whether to cut taxes next year to stimulate the economy and create new jobs.

The Commerce Department revised its August index from a rise of eight-tenths of 1 per cent to 1.4 per cent because of new figures showing big increases in net business formation. This indicator includes businesses' telephone installations and other signs of their willingness to expand.

The August increase was the biggest since a 2 per cent increase in March and a series of 2 and 3 per cent increases in mid-1975 at the end of the recession.

With a one-tenth increase in July, the total three-month increase is 1.8 per cent. In the second quarter of the year, the index was unchanged.

Although the over-all September index rose, the increases were confined to only four of the 10 indicators available. They were changes in the money supply, orders for plants and equipment, changes in sensitive prices and liquid assets.

Causing a drag on the index were poor performances in the average work week, layoff rate, stock prices, new orders, delivery performance and building permits.

The September index stood at 132.4, meaning it is 32.4 per cent ahead of where it was in 1967. At the start of this year the index was 126.5.

Originally, Carter wanted hearings to start this year on his tax bill. But he told a news conference Thursday, "I prefer to make final decisions after Congress completes its actions" on Social Security and energy bills.

Carter has been considering asking Congress to put the tax cut into effect in 1978 if the economy needs a quick boost and to have the rest of the program go into effect in 1979.

But he said Thursday that proper action on tax reduction and economic stimulation could be determined only after studying the economy. He also said the effect of higher Social Security taxes will have to be examined.

The tax program, he said, "will be a major element in a comprehensive economic program designed to promote a strong economy and to deal further with reducing inflation ... and unemployment."

The tax plan, as drafted by the Treasury Department, would cut the tax rate from $1,-739 to $1,370 for the average family of four earning $15,000 to $20,000.

It also would cut corporate taxes, but it would restrict deductions, including those for sales taxes, business lunches and capital gains.

Carter said congressional leaders unanimously agreed with him that the plan should be postponed. Some have said the plan is too ambitious to pass in one year.

The President acknowledged that business faces uncertainty because he has so many proposals pending.

He said that despite his disagreements with Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns, he agrees with him that business profits should be increased. He said that will be one of the objectives of his tax bill.

In other economic developments:

—Carter told a congressional delegation he will not impose import quotas on steel, but will enforce laws against dumping goods on the U.S. market at below-cost prices.

—The House sent a bill to the Senate to improve financing of the Social Security system by increasing taxes on wage-earners and their employers.

—The United Mine Workers union suspended its contract talks with coal employers, saying no progress had been made in three weeks of negotiations.

Our flag flies on both days for both the senior editor and the junior editor are veterans and are so very proud of their country. We know most of you feel the same as we do. So whatever day our government says is Veterans Day, let us all give thanks to those men who gave of theirselves to keep our country free. PROOF IN ADVERTISING?

How's your love life?

Advertisers who suggest you can put some zing into it if you use the right toothpaste or some other product should be forced to prove it, says a former consumer affairs minister in the Canadian government.

Laws protect consumers against advertisements that mislead in other ways, but not against "life style" claims, says Herb Gray. There would be "interesting problems," he thinks, if such claims were required to be tested in court.

So interesting, we think, that this is one thicket the law had best not plunge into — not because this kind of advertising cannot be misleading but because some things are just not susceptible to legal proof.

People have a natural desire to believe that the right toothpaste, mouthwash, deodorant or whatever will enhance their attractiveness to the opposite sex, impress their boss or excite the envy and admiration of their fellows. We can picture manufacturers trooping into court with stacks of signed testimonials from satisfied customers.

Hope springs eternal, in other words, and advertisers are only telling us what we want to thear. There's not much even a consumer advocate can do about that.

XXX

But the world has changed and so has the method of dealing with disruptions of the peace. There may have been a time when a Commander-in-Chief would order soldiers to march the very moment a disturbance occurred. Once upon a time large-scale war would be waged without risking the end of civilization; today, such war is unthinkable. In a matter of moments, we could wipe out a hundred million of our adversaries. They could, in the same amount of time, wipe out a hundred million of our people, taking half of our land in a matter of an hour.

P.S. TO THE NEWS

THE HATCH ACT
COPLEY NEWS SERVICE

The Hatch Act is the law that keeps federal employes from being used as a political machine by their political superiors. It saves government employes from political arm-twisting, overt or subtle, and it saves the public from having the taxpayers' money used for political campaign funds.

The use of government workers as political tools and the milking of government workers for campaign funds was a problem that started as far back as 1791. The assassination of President Garfield by a disappointed office-seeker is one of the famous legacies of the spoils system.

For a century and a half, the complaints did not produce a remedy because they were usually voiced by the party that was not in power. The majority party was usually satisfied with the status quo.

President Franklin Roosevelt signed the Hatch Act in 1939. It was twice challenged in lawsuits. Finally, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that "Congress has the power to regulate within reasonable limits the political conduct of federal employes in order to promote efficiency and integrity in the public service."

We are now told that "election reform" demands the repeal or relaxation of the Hatch Act, principally on the ground that federal employes should have the same rights to political activisim as other citizens.

However, no one has a constitutional right to hold a federal job and, if you do hold one, you must abide by reasonable regulations. The Hatch Act both protects the public from arbitrary harassment by federal political activists and protects federal employes from coercion and intimidation by their supervisors.

Demanding that federal employes make financial contributions to certain candidates is only one of the crufer ways to politicize government workers. Many other subtle methods are just as coercive. All a boss has to do is to show cordiality-partiality to employes who show up at a fund-raising dinner or distribute posters and campaign literature, and other employes quickly get the message.

Your Internal Revenue agent or OSHA inspector could ask you for a political contribution. Your mailman could ask you to sign a petition to put a candidate on the ballot. A federal employe could take leave to run for office, and then return after he loses; how would he feel about those working under him who did not campaign for him?

One incident unearthed during the Bert Lance case provides a classic example of why the Hatch Act should not be repealed. Robert Bloom, first deputy conptroller of the United States, testified before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee on Sept. 12 that his actions on the question of Lance's confirmation were in part motivated by his concern about his own job security and promotion prospects.

Perhaps the Hatch Act tightening up.

But if it were repealed or releaxed, it would convert the 2.8 million federal employes into a partisan political machine.

In regard to the 1st Amendment, the rights of some government employes to get into politics must be balanced off against the rights of other government employes to stay out of politics.

The overriding consideration, however, should be the interest of the public in protecting citizens from harassment by politicized bureaucrats, preventing administrative decisions from being distorted by political pressures and safeguarding the American people from being forced to finance the salaries of government employes who are working for political candidates and goals.

It took us 150 years to get the Hatch Act. We had better not give it up. We might not get it back.

UNEMPLOYMENT CLAIMS ARE LOWER

They could be reduced still further by strict enforcement of the letter of the law.

Those who quit a job of their own accord, or those who refuse to look for or accept work if they don't happen to particularly like it or don't want to work, should not receive compensation.

The law is fine. It is designed and written to protect those who lose their jobs and can't find another. That's as it should be. The difficulty has been that state officials too often approve claims for people tha law was never intended to benefit.

Some additions are also needed to the law. Seasonal workers who make as much in a few months as the average person does in a year should not be entitled to unemployment pay during their idle months. Neither should those who willingly go on strike.

THEY'RE MOVING TO RURAL AREAS

City observers many times comment that city people are leaving the congested areas and moving to rural and small town ones. Some of this, they claim, is a growing fear of violence by those who live in cities, some is a desire to get where air is purer, traffic lighter, living less complicated, the atmosphere better for raising children.

Whatever the causes, the fact many are moving to rural and small town areas is indicated by the subscriber experience of the Appeal. Never in the 109 year old history of the Appeal have so many city subscribers changed their addresses to rural routes or small towns. In Monroe County and its small towns, many who work in distant places have moved in. Many now live only a few acres in the country, but have enough land for a garden, outdoor leisure time space, some livestock if they want it.

The movement results in an asset for small towns, rural areas and the people who are doing the moving. We welcome them.

SUN SPOTS, GRASSHOPPERS

The publication, which has been forecasting the weather for more than a 100 years, says we're in for another cold winter. And we think it is only prudent to warn you that the same almanac predicted cold weather for last winter.

Editors of the almanac say they have a secret formula for making their long range forecasts.

We refuse to believe in long-range forecasts, perhaps because we are afraid to believe it.

Instead of depending on such things as the sun spots, and the tidal action of the moon, we're going to depend on the wooly worms and the grasshoppers. One is about as dependable as the other.

The wooly worms and the grasshopper predict a mild winter, and the folks at the Farmers Almanac can go hang.

With the coming of autumn we look forward with keen anticipation to a nice, mild winter. No more of that 20-below-and-three-feet-of-snowstuff for us. Such is un-American, unethical and should be illegal. And we refuse to believe it will happen again. And we don't believe it unti the snow starts drifting up around our front door.—The (Dexter) Statesman-Messenger

In the Communist heaven the equivalent of St. Peter stopped one applicant at the gate and asked, "What are your qualifications for entering here?"

"Well," said the man, "on earth my father was a rich industrialist. My mother came from a family of middle-class tradesmen. Me, I was a successful writer. And, finally, after inheriting a large sum of money, I married a baroness."

The gatekeeper was choking with rage by this time. "And those are your claims for entering the Communist heaven?" he spluttered.

Meekly the applicant added one more line. "I thought my name might help me," he murmured. "It's Karl Marx."

ENERGY CONTROL PROSPECTS

It seems more than likely that the big oil and uranium companies will gain control of the major coal fields of the nation, giving them power over most of the energy now in general use in the United States.

Consumers will then be largely at the mercy of a few men and women, or companies.

About the only energy producing elements left uncontrolled by them are the sun, (solar energy), the wind, the tides and the flowing streams, and people often wonder when they will attempt to corner the market on these four.

HOW IT WAS FOR FOOTBALL

The advent of fall and the football season reminds older persons in Paris of how it was fifty and more years ago and how it is now in getting to Columbia for a University game.

Those who drove through did so over dirt, often mud, roads, with a number of flat tires to be expected and time required being from early Saturday morning until late Saturday night or early Sunday morning.

Those who preferred train travel left Paris early Saturday, changed at Moberly and again at Centralia, They did the same on the return trip, often not getting back into Paris until an early Sunday morning passenger train arrived.

Today, it's a driving matter of an hour to an hour and a half each way.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

Many decades ago a young man in France was riding the train. At one of the stops a very bent and aged man boarded, clutching and praying his Rosary.

The young man looked him over and asked, "Do you still believe in that stuff? Don't you know that religion can't answer man's questions about the universe? Only science can."

For the duration of the trip, the young man continued his discourse on the merits of science and the relative worthlessness of religion, while the old man continued praying the Rosary. As the train reached the young man's destination, he finally turned to his traveling companion and asked, "By the way, what's your name?"

"Louis Pasteur," came the reply.

Sickness Kills Money:
Drive to Unionize Nurses Hospitals
As Rooms Race to $400 a Day

NEW YORK -- I encountered two awesome phenomena during a visit to a sick friend in a hospital just a few streets south of Columbia University:on the corner was a watchtower. In it were armed guards constantly scanning the surrounding streets. And once safely in my friend's hospital room I learned that its cost was $269 a day. Just for the room alone. Not the aspirins, even.

And I was told that by today's standard rates, this private room was a bargain. Why not a semi-private? Well, the cost runs to $200 a day there -- and far more elsewhere. And special care was needed.

Later, a swift check of other medical centers disclosed my friend's room truly was a bargain. At Sloan-Kettering Memorial Hospital, the private room rate is $347 daily. At Roosevelt it is $325 a day. In New York Hospital it's $320. There are also bargains at Lenox Hill Hospital at $295 each 24 hours and at Mount Sinai, $280.

You might think that the proletariat could fare better in the municipal hospitals compared with the voluntary (civic and religious) institutions I just surveyed. Not really. The cost in the municipal hospitals' corporation installations runs to $264 a day.

Of course I didn't cover all the voluntary hospitals. But I was told by a medical administration specialist that the private rooms now are moving briskly up toward $400 a day -- and the "semi-private" and even some of the modern "wards" are well past $200 daily.

Digging further, I note that a Council on Wage-- Price Stability report to the President reveals that hospital costs have risen over 1,000 per cent since 1950. But one chap in the Paper Handlers Union wraps it up more colorfully than statistics can:

"Five days in a community hospital today," he says, "costs about the same as two weeks in a luxury hotel in Hawaii, including meals and round trip air fare from the West Coast.

"In 1950, just 27 years ago, it cost an average $15.62 per day for a semi-private room including x-rays, drugs, therapy and other hospital services but excluding doctors' fees. Today the average hospital room including the same services, is $244.88 per day."

The point made by the union actually is that many patients don't pay their entire bill. But the insurance companies do. Medicaid and Medicare, which are ripped off hundreds of millions of dollars yearly, do. This means -- you, the taxpayer.

Further, a spokesman for the United Auto Workers complains that the high cost of medical care is stirring labor-management conflict. For the first time in many years, he says, "health care costs are an important factor in labor strife."

He charges corporate efforts to contain health and welfare and medical coverage costs with the responsibility for union unrest such as the recent miners' illegal mass walk-out and last fall's four-week auto union strike at the FordMotor Co.

Well, there are those who say that in many hospitals today productivity and service are lower than a crane's gullet. And wages are higher than the average American worker's income and constitute 50 per cent or more of the cost of running voluntary hospitals such as St. Luke's, St. Clare's, Columbia Presbyterian and Mount Sinai.

And these wages have just begun to mount. In this city, there is, for example, a militant union chief, Leon Davis, who heads the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees AFL-CIO -- otherwise known as District 1199. It sets the national pace for hospital pay and fringe increases.

He built up this organization of some 50,000 members from a small drug clerks union. He has delivered to his people by striking hospitals, clinics and other medical institutions. Some of his mass picket lines have been an urban version of commandos. They've seized hospital administrators' executive offices. They've stopped deliveries of food, medical supplies and even oxygen for awhile. During past strikes whole wards and wings have been emptied and patients removed so they could be cared for elsewhere.

For months now he has been urging his followers to put aside $10 a week for "emergency" use during the contract renewal period next year. His slogan is, "We've got a date in'78.

Davis tells his people they must be ready to do whatever it takes for as long as it takes to win much--needed contract improvements in the hospitals in 1978. Davis always knows what his own constituency wants. He will deliver to them. It will be noisy. He also knows that virtually every one of the 57 voluntary hospitals in New York is losing money. Heavily.

Further, he has launched a drive to unionize Registered Nurses (RNs). There are some 200,000 of them in the American Nurses Association which he is raiding. He tells potential RN recruits that they can count on the solidarity of his other union members in the hospital -- technicians, service people, professionals.

There was a two-day strike at Brookdale Medical Center here recently. It was run by Davis's union. The RNs won. Davis said that no doubt this hospital would have been shut down if it had not settled in two days. The District 1199 members would have observed the picket line.

So Davis is doing his thing. Soon there will be a drive for vertical (industrial-type) top-to-bottom unionism in all hospitals. The only trouble is that it would take the Secret Service to find a hospital in America which isn't losing money. Certainly there are other hospital costs. But who will pay the inevitable $500 a day for a private room? And who says a hospital can't die?

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON - The Justice Department has pieced together enough evidence, insiders say, to indict ex-Rep. Otto Passman, D-La., in the Korean payoff scandal. But out of compassion, government attorneys are reluctant to bring charges against the aging, ailing Passman.

He was born at the turn of the century to tenant farmers, and his early memories are of meals of unseasoned corn bread and clabbered milk. In the summers in backward Washington Parish, his feet were bare as the table, and at 10 he was hired out to a neighboring farmer fo- $5 a month.

The memory of his grim childhood developed in Passman a fierce attachment for every dollar that passed through his hands. Apparently, he couldn't bring himself to let go of the cash that his Korean benefactors allegedly proffered.

On congressional junkets, he was an almost compulsive barterer and buyer at jewelry stores from Geneva to Hong Kong. On his return to the United States, he would demand that Customs pass his luggage unopened.

Customs officers visited his Capitol office in 1964 to quiz him about bringing in undeclared jewelry. Passman admitted he had brought some jewelry home with him from Hong Kong, but he insisted it was just on consignment. He, therefore, didn't feel a need to clear it through customs. The Customs agents left without further argument.

While Passman treated every dollar with tenderness, he was not unmindful of those less blessed. He tithed to the church and was an active Mason. When friends were down on their luck, he was available for a loan and a lecture on economy and Christian living.

At age 77, he is beginning to falter. His six-foot frame, once lean and straight, is now frail. His voice, once stern with righteousness, now quivers. He recently spent 27 days in the hospital; now he must go back for additional treatment.

He told us that he had refused some jewelry that Tongsun Park had once offered him. The only money he ever accepted, he said, was in exchange for watches. He dealt in antique watches and sold "several" to Park, Passman said. Then he added plaintively: "I don't know why people are after me. I am just not able to fight any more."

Watergate Incident: There are still a few jigsaw pieces missing from the Watergate puzzle. The Nixon tapes reveal, for example, that Richard Nixon hoped to save his own skin by offering the special prosecutor a sacrificial lamb.

The scapegoat he had in mind, according to the tapes, was his own close friend and former law partner, ex-Attorney General John Mitchell. It was whispered around Washington that Mitchell had learned of the double-cross and had turned balky and bitter.

The real truth, we've now learned, is that Mitchell offered himself as a sacrificial lamb. He would be willing to plead guilty to a felony, he proposed, if the special prosecutor would spare Nixon.

Mitchell directed his attorney, William Hundley, to present the offer to the special prosecutor's office in 1973. Hundley spoke to James Neal, who was then second in command under Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox. The prosecutors, however, refused to make a deal.

So far as our sources know, Mitchell never told Nixon about his gesture.

Footnote: Of course, Nixon was pardoned, and Mitchell is now serving out his sentence. Attorney Hundley, meanwhile, has made a personal appeal to Attorney General Griffin Bell to release Mitchell for medical treatment.

"In typical John Mitchell fashion," wrote Hundley, "he down-played the medical problem when interviewed by the probation officer ... I am really concerned that the constant pain, the need for surgery and the continued incarceration, coupled with all his other problems, could be too much even for a strong man like John Mitchell."

Merry Xxmas: Exxon simply won't allow two X's in Xmas. Like a modern scrooge, the giant, multi-billion-dollar oil consortium has stopped a small Dallas firm from selling XXmas cards.

The Horchow Collection, in its Christmas card catalog, offered an ingenious card patterned after an Exxon credit card but using "Xxmas Greetings" in place of the word Exxon.

The card seemed harmless enough; it might even be considered a free ad for the oil conglomerate. But Exxon takes itself with such seriousness that it threatened legal action.

"Exxon's lawyers took exception to it," explained Horchow's Ms. Kitty Lane, with a notable lack of Christmas cheer in her voice. "To try to fight something like Exxon, it's a losing battle."

Horchow sent out a letter to customers who had ordered the card, asking them to choose another one. "If Exxon were represented by a reindeer instead of a tiger," the letter suggested, "it might have been a different story."

In New York City, an Exxon spokesman confirmed that the company had asked Horchow to kill the Xxmas card. "It was clearly a trade mark infringement," he told us.

We thought we heard him add: "Humbug!"

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bipartisan coalition in the Senate wants to end debate on a $49 billion package of energy tax breaks and ship the bills back to committee with instructions to start over.

House Republican leader John Rhodes of Arizona, who last Sunday called the Carter administration "a terrible failure," said the administration's problem is not style but "ineptitude."

Arms embargo supported

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The five Western nations on the U.N. Security Council, including the United States, have agreed to support a mandatory arms embargo against South Africa.

But African delegates are unhappy with the Western proposal because it provides only for a six-month embargo, which could be renewed, and because it includes no economic restrictions.

Palestinians responsible

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A young Palestinian trained as an aviation engineer led the hijacking of a West German jetliner two weeks ago, a Palestinian splinter group said in claiming responsibility for the terrorist operation.

Millionaire kidnaped

AMSTERDAM, The Netherlands (AP) — A millionaire Dutch businessman was kidnaped early today as he left a nightclub, and a telephone caller claimed West Germany's Red Army Faction terrorist group was responsible.

Witnesses said about five persons subdued Maurits Caransa, 61, after a struggle outside the Continental Club, where he had been playing bridge, and forced him into a car. Caransa owns a chain of hotels and clubs in Holland and is prominent in Jewish activities.

Supporters of the Red Army Faction also claimed responsibility for bombings of two West German car showrooms in Milan, one in and Rome and a German engineering company office in Lisbon today. No injuries were reported.

Callers told police the bombs, like others that damaged West German property across Europe last week, were planted to avenge the Oct. 18 prison deaths of three leaders of the German terrorist underground — Andreas Baader, Gudrun Ensslin and Jan-Carl Raspe.

The Amsterdam kidnapping followed a warning by West German Justice Minister HansJochen Vogel that the prison deaths, which officials termed suicides, were not "acts of resignation" but a sign that "further attacks are looming."

A German-speaking man called the Amsterdam newspaper Het Parool and told a switchboard operator: "We are the Red Army Faction. We have Caransa. You will hear from us."

Dutch police are holding a member of the Red Army Faction, Knut Folkerts, 25, on murder charges. He was arrested following a Sept. 22 shootout at Utrecht in which a policeman was killed and is also wanted for terrorist activities in West Germany.

Caransa has extensive properties in Holland, about half of them in the hotel and catering industry. He also sits on the boards of a number of companies.

The businessman is married and has one grown daughter. During World War II Caransa spent 13 weeks in a Nazi camp in Holland with other Jews awaiting deportation to concentration camps in Germany, but he was never sent. Friends say he makes regular donations to Jewish organizations.

Lung cancer vulnerable

WASHINGTON (AP) — Multiple drug therapy is giving life expectancies of as long as 18 months to some lung cancer patients who usually would die within three months of diagnosis, a National Cancer Institute scientist says.

Dr. John D. Minna said Thursday that small-cell lung cancer, a rapid spreading type of the disease, is proving vulnerable to high dose multi-drug chemotherapy used alone or with radiation.

About 20,000 of the nation's 98,000 lung cancer victims each year have small-cell lung cancer.

Minna told a seminar at the National Institutes of Health that the median survival for untreated patients with the small-cell cancer is three months after diagnosis.

Summarizing recent studies from 10 medical centers using multiple-drug chemotherapy and radiation treatment, Minna said median survival for these 563 patients is approaching one year.

He disclosed that unpublished data from three NCI treatment centers using concentrated combination therapy show median survival reaching almost 18 months in patients with early-stage small-cell cancer.

"This figure is extremely good compared with other results," Minna said. "I think this shows the disease can be cured with chemotherapy or chemotherapy combined with other treatments."

But he said optimism should be tempered with the knowledge that many of these surviving patients will be dead in two years, indicating better treatments still are needed.

He also stressed that the newest therapy is in large part still experimental and available only at large cancer treatment centers.

Since the multi-drug therapy gets best results with earlystage cancer that hasn't spread too far, early detection is important, he said.

High-risk persons, such as middle-aged heavy smokers, should get annual chest X-rays and periodic examination of mucus from the lungs to see if cancer cells are present, he added.

Despite treatment advances, Minna said, 80 per cent of the 98,000 persons who develop lung cancer this year will be dead within two years of diagnosis.

Lung cancer is the No. 1 malignancy killing men and rates as No. 2 behind breast cancer as the most fatal form for women. Most lung cancer can be attributed to cigarettes and Minna said he was disturbed by recent increases in women smoking.

New officers

Phil Barkett Jr., left, has been re-elected president of the Scott County unit of the American Cancer Society for the coming campaign year. Other officers for this year are Sandra Sharp, secretary and Don Agnew, treasurer. Tom Arnold of Benton will serve as vice president of the group, which has set the goal for the coming year at $7,156.43.

Phil Barkett Jr. was reelected president Thursday night of the Scott County unit of the American Cancer Society.

Other officers for the coming campaign year are Tom Arnold of Benton, vice president; Sandra Sharp of Sikeston, secretary and Don Agnew of Sikeston, treasurer.

Chairman serving this year will be Ernest Elledge, public education; Dr. Robert Ahlvin, professional education; Pat Grojean, public information; Harryette Campbell, memorials; Addie Mae Jones, special events; and Roger Tolliver, nominating.

A goal of $7,156.43 was set for the 1977-1978 campaign.

Elledge reported that local activities for the Great American Smokeout, set Nov. 17 are well under way. An interview with Don Agnew of Sikeston and Diana Lafferty, president of the Parent-Teacher Organization at Morehouse, was taped Thursday and will be shown at 6:30 p.m. today on Cable television Channel 6, preceding the Sikeston football game. The two will be interviewed by a Sikeston High School student on the Great American Smokeout and smoking in general.

Posters and pledge cards for the project have been placed in all banks and in most doctor's offices in Sikeston. Elledge hopes to have students gathering pledges at the high school on a continuous basis, and Nov. 5 and Nov. 12, members of the Sikeston Junior Woman's Club will assist the Cancer Society by manning a booth at the Kingsway Mall where pledge cards may be signed.

Linda Lawrence, of Cape Girardeau, field representative for the Cancer society in Southeast Missouri, presented three cancer films to Elledge for use in the school systems. The films will be shown in the high school, junior high and middle schools, to about 2500 students, beginning next week. Another film will be shown to 2200 elementary students.

Fateful Congress

The 20th Congress held by the Soviet Communist party Feb. 14-25, 1956, was one of the most fateful gatherings of modern times. At the Moscow sessions, Nikita S. Khrushchev denounced Joseph Stalin, repudiated the cruelties of Stalinism and proclaimed a new policy of peaceful coexistence with the West. The new party line alienated Chinese Communists and hastened the split that continues to divide the Communist world.

'Butterflies' wins audience with first show

By Sue Ellen Payne

If I wasn't so sure (or am I?) that this was a Sikeston Little Theatre production, I would swear "Butterflies are Free" was on Broadway for the first time.

"Butterflies are Free", Sikeston Little Theatre's first production of the 1977-78 season is a contemporary romantic comedy-drama by Leonard Gershe that WAS highly successful on Broadway. It became a popular movie starring Goldie Hawn and Edward Albert.

However, not seeing the Broadway run or the movie either, but being familiar with the script and also a great theatre and film buff, I believed I could be more objective with this production and its characters.

Veteran Little Theatre performer Lee Crites almost had me convinced that he was actually blind. The very astute young man who memorizes how many steps it takes to reach the drugstore, laundry and delicatessan, tries to break away from his mother's apron strings without much success in the first act. There is something missing in the character, Don Baker's life, and he is trying to find it.

Crites, truly dynamic in his performance as Don Baker, can be remembered as last season's scarecrow in the "Wizard of Oz" and Brick in "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof".

After first seeing Don in his not-so-perfect New York apartment, in steps "the girl-next door," Jill Tanner or "Mrs. Benson" as she is later known in the play.

Jill, portrayed by Joyce Sanders of Charleston is a newcomer to the Sikeston Little Theatre, but, that doesn't take away from her performance as the sometimes half-wit with the incurable appetite. Despite her vices, she becomes a great help to Don and actually falls for him. Joyce is convincing and marvelously enjoyable in her role as the butterfly.

Both Don and Jill are portrayed at their highest in a scene played excellently as they are shown sharing confidences after they first make love. Both actors are partially shown in underwear which today is not only seen in plays and movies, but also on television and the act should be thought of as real as brushing your teeth.

The hovering, domineering Mrs. Baker Don's mother, appears next played by Trish McAlister, another newcomer to the Sikeston Little Theatre stage. Mrs. Baker waltzes in, effervescent in half a bottle of Saks Fifth Avenue's best cologne, and tries to persuade Don in believing he has made a terrible mistake in leaving home. McAlister plays a vital role to the performance but it is difficult to believe that she is actually that domineering in real life.

The cameo appearance of Francis Schumacher as Ralph Austin, a boyfriend of Jill's plants the seed that will rise to the excellent finish of the performance. Schumacher, who also built the set for the show, is too a veteran of several Little Theatre productions.

Along with the excellent direction by Jim Wenneker and many others on the production staff, Sikeston's production of "Butterflies are Free", is truly worth the ticket price. I could hardly tell it was opening night.

Performances will continue through Saturday night with curtain time at 8 p.m. at the Sikeston Activity Center, 201 S. Kingshighway. Don't miss it.

By the way, I could have sworn I was on Broadway last night.

Dear Ann Landers

Reader says pre-marital sex not worth it

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing this for "The Wife of a Sex Maniac." Please print it. She needs to know a few things. The woman wrote that she and her husband are in their early 60s and she has had enough sex to last her a lifetime. Her husband, however, is still very much interested in bedroom gymnastics. To keep him from going elsewhere she never refuses him and even pretends to enjoy it.

I went along with "wife" to that point -- but when she said, "I am in favor of premarital sex on the basis that it's wise to learn what the other person's sex appetite is like BEFORE marriage" -- wrong, wrong, wrong.

I have been married three years to a man who had an inappetite for sex when we were going together. We saw each other every night for two years and at least three nights a week for 11 months before that. He was after me all the time. I was both flattered and exhausted. I also wondered how I would be able to keep up with him after marriage. Well, I didn't have to worry. Now I find myself begging him to make love to me and it's degrading.

So let this be a lesson to girls who think they have to try it out for "educational purposes." You won't learn a thing. -- I Didn't

Dear I.D.: You speak the truth, lady. There is something about the "forbidden" that makes it much more appealing. Why? Human nature -- the excitement of risk-taking.

And it can work in reverse, too. Some married couples report that their sex life improved greatly after marriage. They became more relaxed, more comfortable with one another and their love grew deeper and more meaningful. The most erogenous zone in both male female is located between the eyebrows and the hairline.

BOOK REVIEW

Picking up effortlessly at the point where he left off in his best-selling "All Things Bright and Beautiful," James Herriot once again takes his delighted readers on a journey back in time to the days when he was a young veterinarian.

World War II is raging and Herriot has left his rural Yorkshire practice to join the RAF and become a pilot. But while his body is undergoing the rigors of basic training, Herriot's mind returns ever so often to his beloved Yorkshire and thus his book has only a little in it about the war and his part in it and a great deal about the people and the animals that played such an important role in his life.

Readers of Herriot's two previous books will know what to expect in "All Things Wise And Wonderful." There is no plot line, as such. Rather the book is a wonderful collection of stories about the many, many things that happened to Herriot as he made his rounds tending to the animals that needed his gentle ministrations

Two of the best defensive clubs in the Northern Division (apologies to Cape Central) will be featured in tonight's 7:30 clash between the Jackson Indians and Sikeston Bulldogs.

Under coach Paul Webber the Indians have established a long tradition for hard-hitting defense. A solid wishbone attack has helped carry them to a 6-1 mark this year. Added incentives for the Injuns will be stinging memories of a 22-21 defeat last year that they think they never should have lost.

Meanwhile, Sikeston has embarked on a rebuilding project with defense of last year's conference title now out of the picture. Stepping into the Bulldog backfield will be sophomores Johnny Longstreet and Gary Lasater. Both are big, with good speed, and both had a big hand in this year's junior varsity team running up a 6-1 card. Another soph, Terry Duncan, will join the defensive lineup at halfback. He replaces Gary Leonard, Sikeston's leading rusher, who is injured.

Glynn Felton, who has played sparingly in games of late, will be available for fulltime duty. If the offense continues to bog down, the sprinter may move back into the backfield, where he led the team in rushing through the first four games.

A year ago at this time runner James Wilder had over a thousand rushing yards. Right now, all the Bulldog backs combined barely top that figure. A year ago Sikeston was completing passes at a 60 per cent clip. The Dogs' passing attack has been successful well less than half thatmark. And, the problems can be traced back to the medical report.

Lineman Scotty Heeb was the first to go, exiting for the season in the second game. Injuries to Alfred White, Mike Lasater, Felton and many others, have contributed to a musical chairs setup in the Bulldog offensive line. As everyone knows,timing and experience is far more important on offense than defense and moving the ball has been the biggest problem facing Sikeston this year. Four times in eight games the Dogs have totalled less than 150 yards in a game.

When everyone was healthy, against Perryville, Kennett and Caruthersville, the Bulldogs moved the ball well. Kennett is a young team, but Perryville (when Sikeston played them) and Caruthersville are well respected for their defensive abilities.

The defense, on the other hand, has kept Sikeston in the game throughout all of the contests. The average yield of 175 yards per game approximates what last year's SHS defense gave up, but this year's team has surrendered only 55 points in eight starts, an average of less than seven per outing. Last year's team gave up 13 points per game. And, they were on the field much less than this year.

It will be thrown back on the Sikeston players' shoulders tonight. The Indians are a super-tough team looking for revenge for last year's last-minute loss to Sikeston. (The heart-stopper, 22-21 on a last-second field goal, was the first win for Sikeston against Jackson in four years.) If some of the "wise " seniors can lend some of their expertise to the underclassmen who are being groomed to take their place in '78, Jackson's revenge may have to wait a year!

Time Out

By CHARLIE FRANCIS
Daily Standard Sports Editor

With junior varsity tournaments coming up next week at Bell City and Fisk, the 1977-78 high school basketball season is upon us again. It seems like it was only last month that Charleston took second place in the 3A state tournament to bring a curtain down on that thrillingcampaign.

We want to reiterate our request for all area coaches to please mail in their schedules and rosters to our sports desk. We would like to receive both boys and girls schedules. The address is: Sports Desk, Daily Standard, 205 S. New Madrid St., Sikeston, MO 63801.

What's in store in SeMo basketball this year? It's going to be hard to top last year's campaign, but this season is going another dandy.

Preseason favorites? In Class 1A, with all due respect to what should be fine clubs at Richland, Advance and Bell City, I'm picking Delta C-7 to be the strongest of the small schools and make a run at the state championship. All key personnel are returning from the team that gave Matthews all they wanted in the semifinals of the 1A Regional at Bloomfield back in March. If Coach Gary Russo can teach his team to play even respectably on defense, the chargers will be tough to beat.

Look for the old stand-bye to be strong again in Class 2A. Lilbourn should be strong again after an off year lost season and may have more good personnel back than any other 2A club. But you can bet that Woodland, Kelly and Notre Dame will be right there, too.

Ricky Frazier, Percy Owens, Wilbert McCain and Michael Smith are gone, but I think Charleston will have to try hard to keep from winning 20 ballgames this season. Mike Dean and Danny Farmer are holdovers from last year's powerhouse, and amultitude of talented B teamers should keep new coach Lennies McFerren stocked with good ballplayers for quite a while. And watch for Kennett to be a sleeper in 3A this season.

Cape Central and Poplar Bluff will battle it out in the fight for a 4A state tournament berth. I'd give the nod to Central right now. Sophomores played a key role in last year's fine Central squad, and those players will have a season under their belts that could make a big difference for the Tigers.

Sikeston lost their top nine players, but the Bulldogs aren't about to roll over and play dead for anybody this campaign. There will be no shortage of frontline height for the Dogs, although experience there will be a big question mark. If Bud Spears can come up with some offensive punch from the guard spot and a floor leader to take charge, Sikeston might fool a few people.

So get ready to get your season tickets, folks. It's gonna be a heck of a year.

A pat on the back is due to Gary Howard and the Board of Directors of the Southeast Missouri Amateur Baseball Hall of Fame for their splendid banquet Saturday night at the Elks Lodge.

Howard took the bull by the horns and got the organization off the ground, providing something that has long been lacking in Southeast Missouri sports -- a means of recognizing and honoring our own local athletes. The official recognition given to the first nine inductees was overdue.

It looks as if the SeMo Amateur Baseball Hall of Fame is going to be a success. It would be nice if something similar could be done to honor the local men who have excelled in other sports. What would be wrong with a SeMo Football Hall of Fame? Or the same for basketball? How about the great golfers from this area?

It would be worth thinking about seriously.

And while we're on the subject of banquets, the Ducks Unlimited fund raising dinner Monday evening at Ramada Inn was a success for the fifth straight year.

The affair was well-organized, largely due to the efforts of Bill Dillon, Art Hobbs, Jim Cox and Jim Warf. Those who shelled out their ten becks for the cocktail party and dinner were treated to a delicious meal, a fine program and fellowship with other outdoor enthusiasts. I wish I had a nickel for every duck hunting story that was rehashed Monday night.

The money raised will eventually come right back to the contributors, in the form of better duck hunting in the future. Ducks Unlimited leases land in Canada to restore and develop waterfowl habitat, one of the keys to a good waterfowl population.

Keep up the good work, DU!

SJHS teams finish year unbeaten

CHARLESTON -- Sikeston's junior high powerhouse swept gridiron twinbill at Charleston Thursday. Both the eighth and ninth grade teams finished undefeated.

"George (Hale) and Martin (Bass) have a lot to look forward to next year," said coach Mike Foster about his team. "This is a good group of boys."

The eighth grade defeated Charleston's eighth-graders 14-12 to complete a third undefeated season at 5-0. After a first period score, set up by a flubbed snap on a Sikeston punt, the Bulldogs tied the count in the second period and went ahead to stay in the third. Although Charleston closed within two points on a 65-yard run three minutes before the game's end, Sikeston lost a six-pointer on a disputed play that would have made the final score not quite so close.

The Sikeston freshmen completed their perfect season with a 24-0 blitz of Charleston in the nightcap. Head coach George Hale had plenty of opportunity to give players experience. While the defense was racking up its fifth shutout in six games, SJHS had jumped to a 16-0 halftime lead. Secure with the two-touchdown lead and a strong defense, Hale was able to get some subs on the field in the second quarter and everyone got to play in the second half.

The Sikeston freshmen outscored their six opponents 101 to eight this year, the only comping late in a win over Poplar Bluff.

In the eighth grade game, a short run put the Jays on the board first, early in the initial period. The hosts got their opportunity when Sikeston dropped back to punt and the Bullpup punter elected to down the ball rather than attempt a risky punt after a bad snap. Taking over at the 20, Charleston scored on a 12-yard run for a 6-0 lead.

Nick Garner tied the count for Sikeston on a four-yard run in the second quarter. The Bullpups jumped offsides on the conversion attempt, but stood even at 6-6.

Sikeston scored again, just before half, when Steve Green went 18 yards on a bootleg for a score. Timmie Wyse ran the two-point conversion and Sikeston led at intermission 14-6.

The 65-yard run put The Jays within two at 14-12 with three minutes left, but a run for two failed. Sikeston took the following kickoff, drove down the field and appeared to score when a Sikeston back fumbled in the endzone. The officials ruled that the runner had fumbled before reaching the endzone and the score was nullified.

The eighth-graders have won their last 19 ballgames.

The frosh had a much easier time of it in their 24-0 romp.A Mike Sherman to Edwin Beasley pass that covered 45 yards put the visitors on the board first. When Rusty Greer ran the conversion in, Sikeston led 8-0.

Halfback Undra Lane put another score on the board for Sikeston in the second period, crossing the goal from the four. Scotty McDowell ran the two-pointer for a 16-0 lead at half.

Fullback Rusty Greer scored the third Sikeston touchdown early in the third period on a three-yard run. McDowell added the final points on the conversion run.

Cardinal punter Carrell: Paid to get them off

ST. LOUIS (AP) — His punts aren't the highest. They don't float featherlike in the air. They aren't the longest either. And sometimes they aren't very pretty.

But none of that matters to Duane Carrell, 28, a well-traveled veteran now with the St. Louis Cardinals. What matters is that they aren't blocked.

"What I'm supposed to do is make sure I get the ball off," he said as the Big Red prepared for a National Football League contest against the New York Giants Monday. "I feel that with a lot of people coming in hard at me, the idea is to get it off and worry about distance later."

Carrell was picked up by the Cardinals two weeks ago, shortly after they released Terry Joyce. All too often, Joyce, a graceful, lanky punter, booted them into the chest of defenders.

"I don't have the great natural ability to kick the ball a mile everytime out the way a Ray Guy (Oakland's all-pro punter) can. I can get itout there, but not 50 or 60 yards every time."

The lack of style and distance might have something to do with Carrell's size; at 5-feet-10 and 185 pounds, he's just about the smallest punter in the league.

It's the second time Carrell has worn the St. Louis uniform. The first time was in 1973 when the Cards brought him to training camp as a place-kicker. Unfortunately, he had to contend with a guy named Jim Bakken. He was released.

Since then he has played in the World Football League. He also has punted for Dallas, Los Angeles, and the New York Jets, where he set a club record of 81 punts last year.

He is especially glad to be back in St. Louis. His wife is from nearby Pittsfield, Ill.

GOLF

PENSACOLA, Fla. — Mac McLendon scrambled to a five-under-par 66 and a one-stroke lead in the first round of the $125,000 Pensacola Open Golf Tournament.

McLendon one-putted 12 times, needed only 10 strokes on the greens on the back nine at the tree-lined, 6,549-yard Pensacola Country Club and took the lead with his longest putt of the day, a 20-footer for birdie, on the 18th hole.

FIGURE SKATING

MONCTON, New Brunswick — Charles Tickner of Littleton, Colo., and women's world champion Linda Fratianne of Northridge, Calif., led the first phase of competition in compulsory figures at Skate Canada 77.

Tickner had 14 ordinals and 40.96 points. Miss Fratianne held a comfortable lead with 10 ordinals 43.28 points.

Tickner was only slightly ahead of Robin Cousins of Britain who has 16 ordinals and 41 points.

Among the women, Claudia Kristofics-Binder of Austria is a distant second with 20 ordinals and 41.20 points while Emi Watanabe of Japan is third with 26 ordinals and 40.84 points.

TENNIS

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — Fourth seeded Billie Jean King won two singles matches and moved into the semifinals of the $75,000 Borinquen tennis classic.

Top-seeded Betty Stove of the Netherlands bruised her knees in a nasty fall but went on to beat Brigitte Cuypers of South Africa 6-4, 7-5 and attain the quarter-finals.

Ms. King came from behind to defeat fellow New Yorker Kristien Shaw 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 in a gruelling two-hour-and-20-minute match.

Three hours later, she was back on center court against Romania's Virginia Ruzici, whom she bested 6-3, 6-1.

In a quarter-final match seventh-seeded Joanne Russell of Naples, Fla., defeated second seeded Rosie Casals of Sausalito, Calif., 6-4, 6-2. Unseeded Janet Newbury of St. Petersburg, Fla., defeated Betsy Nagelson of Winnetka, Ill., 7-5, 6-1, then went on to whip Wendy Turnbull of Australia, who was seeded eighth in a quarter-final match, 6-2, 6-0.

PERTH, Australia — Australians Geoff Masters and Tony Roche and American Hank Pfister won their way into the semifinals of the Hitachi Tennis Classic.

Jiri Hibrec of Czechoslovakia also advanced, beating Bill Scanlon 6-4, 7-6, but referee Vic Anderson was prepared to report him for unbecoming conduct.

THE COLLEGES

When Bob Blackman was named Cornell's head football coach before the start of the season, Athletic Director Dick Schultz said, "We're sending a warning to all the other Ivy League schools that the sleeping giant has awakened."

Fair enough.

Now, maybe someone should get the giant out on the football field. Cornell losts its sixth game in six tries Saturday to jump to number one in the Bottom Ten as the only winless school in major college football, besides Northwestern (0-7).

Rice (1-6) fell to number 3 after the defense fell short of its 47 point-per-game, but could move back up. The Owls must play in the daylight this week against Arkansas.

UTEP, outscored 115-10 in its last two games, has a bye this week, and Coach Bill Michaels plans to take the team (1-6) to Lourdes in search of a cure.

Milton defeated Lakeland. TCU (1-4) was ordered to show cause why it should be reinstated in the Bottom Ten.

THE RANKINGS

Team (Record)	Last Week	Next Loss
1) Cornell (0-6)	13-17, Dartmouth	Yale
2) Northwestern (0-7)	16-35, Ohio St.	Purdue
3) Rice (1-6)	14-28, Texas A & M	Arkansas
4) UTEP (1-6)	3-66, Arizona State	Idle
5) Wake Forest (1-6)	10-12, Virginia	Clemson
6) Virginia (1-5-1)	Def. Wake Forest 12-10	Syracuse
7) Utah State (1-5)	Idle	Boise State
8) Vanderbilt (1-6)	14-26, Mississippi	Idle
9) (tie) Kansas (1-5-1)	0-21, Okla. State	Iowa State
10) Kansas State (2-6)	13-28 Missouri	Oklahoma

11) Columbia (2-4), 12) Princeton (2-4), 13) Tulane (2-5), 14) New Mexico (2-5), 15) Syracuse (2-5), 16) Utah (2-4), 17) Oregon State (2-5), 18) TCU (2-4), 19) Indiana (2-4-1), 20) Hawaii (3-4).

CRUMMY GAME OF THE WEEK -- Virginia vs. Syracuse.

ROUT OF THE WEEK -- (tie) Oklahoma vs. Kansas State and Iowa State vs. Kansas.

SPECIAL CITATION: When Notre Dame players went to see the movie "Rocky" the night before the USC game, one player thought it was the biography of the great Fighting Irish coach, "Kunte Rocky."

THE PROS

The game was held at Tampa Bay and as usual Tampa's offense was held at bay.

Averaging six points a game, the Bottom Ten leading Bucs took it on the chinstrap for their 20th straight time in regular season play, 13-0. Elsewhere, Atlanta's Nick Mike-Mayer broke a streak of six straight missed field goals to kick ninth-rated Chicago (2-4).

The turning point came before the game when Mike-Mayer agreed that he would no longer act as his own holder on place kick attempts.

Number two Buffalo prepared all week for Cleveland's outside running game. But once the Browns were inside the stadium, the hopeless Bills (1-5) proved no match for them.

Sunday marked the return of the 49ers cheerleaders (the Nuggets), who had stayed away from the previous week's game because they felt they weren't appreciated by the team (1-5). They returned at the request of the San Francisco management, although Jim Plunkett was allowed to call their formations.

Texas Tech to key on Campbell in bid for upset over Longhorns

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

"I think so much of him," says the Texas Tech coach, "that I went out and bought a truck just like him."

Sloan says the Red Raiders have to put a stop sign in Campbell's way if they hope to beat the nation's top-ranked team.

"Considering that we haven't tackled Campbell in two years, I'd say we're going to have our hands full," Sloan said of the important Southwest Conference game Saturday.

Campbell has been a dashing figure for three years in college football, but only once did he actually wreck the Red Raiders. That was in 1975, when his 150 rushing yards led a 52-15 Longhorns' rout.

But in 1974 and 1976, when Campbell had sub-par games, the Longhorns were losers.

This year, Campbell is en route to his best season, and the powerful Texas running back is coming off the biggest game of his career—a 213-yard performance against SMU.

While the 14th-ranked Red Raiders will be preparing for Campbell, Texas will be doing the same for Texas Tech quarterback Rodney Allison, even if he is a doubtful starter because of injury. Allison's brilliance in last year's game provided Texas Tech with a 31-28 victory.

"Rodney was a little better today," Sloan said Thursday of his star who has been sidelined with a broken leg since Sept. 16. "But he's still not anywhere near full speed. He's throwing pretty well, but he still doesn't run very well."

Along with Texas and Texas Tech, the rest of the Top Twenty teams will see action Saturday.

Second-ranked Alabama plays Mississippi State in a Southeastern Conference game at Jackson, Miss. The Crimson Tide is fresh off a 55-6 rout of Louisville.

Wisconsin makes its 18th try to win against third-ranked Ohio State in Ohio Stadium and Badgers Coach John Jardine wants to hear none of that "jinx" talk.

"I don't even like to talk about it because it takes away from what you're concentrating on," said Jardine.

The giant horseshoe stadium was built in 1922, four years after the Badgers last won at Columbus. Wisconsin is 0-15-2 playing in Ohio Stadium.

Three of the country's best linebackers will be on display when fourth-ranked Oklahoma, the only unbeaten team in Big Eight Conference action, plays at Kansas State.

Oklahoma Coach Barry Switzer suggests that Daryl Hunt and George Cumby might be the best pair the Sooners have ever had. Gary Spani of Kansas State has been closing out a four-year career in brilliant style. He is the second-leading tackler in the league behind Hunt.

Representatives from several bowl games will be on hand when fifth-ranked Notre Dame plays Navy at South Bend, Ind.. The Irish are coming off an impressive 49-19 victory over Southern California, and with their 5-1 record, rate a look by bowl scouts.

"We seem to play well against bigger teams, and what worries me about Navy is that they are smaller and quicker, well-coached and well-disciplined above all, tenacious," said Notre Dame Coach Dan Devine.

Berra, Cox, Aaron in running for job

ATLANTA (AP) — Officials of the Atlanta Braves want to talk with coaches Yogi Berra and Bobby Cox of the New York Yankees about managing the National League club.

And Hank Aaron, major league baseball's all-time home run king, says he will take the job if Braves owner Ted Turner asks him.

Bill Lucas, the Braves' director of player personnel, said Thursday he had asked Gabe Paul, Yankees general manager, for permission to approach Berra and Cox.

Approval of his request "should only be a formality," Lucas said.

But Lucas said, "There is no leading candidate" for the job, despite published reports that Berra, the former Yankees' AllStar catcher as well as manager of the Yankees and Mets, and Aaron were the frontrunners for the job.

In a telephone interview from Washington with The Atlanta Journal, Aaron said Thursday, "I haven't asked for the job, nor am I actively seeking it, but if Ted Turner wants me I'll do my best. I'd do it because of the love and respect I have for him."

He also spent two years with the Brewers in Milwaukee, a town that was the Braves' home during many of Aaron's best years, before rejoining Atlanta in a front office job as head of the Braves' farm system after the 1976 season.

Berra and Aaron reportedly are high on the list of possible replacements for Dave Bristol, who was fired Monday after two years as Braves manager.

Berra, 52, a member of baseball's Hall of Fame, said he hasn't heard from the Braves yet, but "I'm always willing to listen," adding, "I might want to manage again."

Berra took over the Mets in 1972 and managed them to a pennant in 1973, when they lost the World Series to Oakland in seven games. He was fired late in the 1975 season.

Injuries hit Tiger cagers

Kevin Williams, the Tigers' 6-10 freshman center from Nevada, Mo., suffered a bad ankle sprain the first day out and had the foot casted. He will be sidelined approximately three weeks.

Then senior guard Jeff Currie, who missed all of last season with a kidney ailment, siffered a slight break in a bone in his left hand when he was kneed in practice last Thursday. Currie has a light cast on the hand but he was able to resume practice Tuesday.

"It's a little unusual to have so many injuries of this type during the first week when you're just going over a lot of things," Stewart noted. "I wouldn't have been so surprised if they had come later when we are scrimmaging hard."

If nothing else, the tender limbs of veterans Currie, Drew and Droy have given the Tiger coaches a better look at the younger members of the squad -- particularly the 10 freshmen and sophomores.

CAPE GIRARDEAU— Northeast Missouri State University football team, tied for tenth in the NCAA Division II poll, brings its 6-1 season mark to Houck Stadium Saturday for a 1:30 p.m. Homecoming contest against Southeast Missouri State University.

Both teams hold a 2-0 MIAA record, Northeast Missouri State having beaten Southwest Missouri State University 49-0, and Lincoln University 57-0, and SEMO State having defeated Central Missouri State University 40-28, and Northwest Missouri State University 16-0.

"They are a lot bigger, a lot stronger, and a lot faster than last year's team," noted SEMO State Head Coach Jim Lohr. "Their biggest plus is that they have played together. They have a year's more experience."

Another big plus for Northeast is senior running back Steve Powell, an honorable mention on the Associated Press Little All-American team in 1976.

Powell, a native of Kirkwood, is currently the NCAA Division II rushing leader, having gained 1086 yards in 150 carries for eight touchdowns. Powell is also the leading scorer in the conference with 54 points, four points ahead of SEMO State kicker Mike Wood.

Lohr, however, warned against any team keying its defense too heavily on the talented running back. "You can't make adjustments only for Powell because there are so many other ways they (the Bulldogs) can beat you."

Another way the Bulldogs can beat you is with passing. Quarterback Steve Rampy, a junior from Hannibal, has connected on 47 of 101 passes this season for 640 yards and nine touchdowns.

Rampy's favorite receiver is senior split end Lloyd Henry, of Waterloo, Iowa, who has caught 18 passes for 331 yards and six touchdowns. Like teammate Powell, Henry was an honorable mention in the AP Little All-American team last year.

In addition to an excellent offensive unit, which piled up a school record of 616 total offensive yards last week against Lincoln, the Bulldogs boast a defense that has limited opponents to 355 total yards an outingand 11.7 points per game.

Northeast's defense, which has not allowed a point to be scored against it the past two games, will be trying to stop two of the league's leading rushers in Jack Gokin and Bill White.

Gokin, a senior from St. Louis, has rushed for more than 100 yards in three of the last four games and is fourth in MIAA rushing with 583 yards in 99 carries and four touchdowns.

White, a freshman from Rock Hill, ranks sixth in conference rushing, having carried 69 times for 524 yards and five touchdowns.

The starting quarterback for the Indians will be Don Backfisch, a senior from Dexter. This season he has completed 32 of 77 passes for 380 yards and a touchdown.

"The team that wants it the most will be the winner," Lohr said. "We have to be enthused and utilize our quickness or we won't be able to win."

Mizzou gunning to snap Boulder winless streak

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Missouri hasn't whipped Colorado in the mountains since 1965, and just a month ago that string seemed a cinch to continue this year.

But how far the pendulum has swung.

Colorado roared away with a 5-0 mark the first five games of the season and was bidding for national honors. Missouri staggered to its worst start in years and was 1-5 by the time quarterback Pete Woods recovered from a season-opening knee injury.

But the Buffs haven't won in two weeks and they have lost two of their finest defensive players to injury and neartragedy.

First, linebacker Brian Cabral was cut down with injury. Then in a loss to Nebraska last week, Tom Perry, the big, talented senior linebacker who probably would have been a first-round draft choice, suffered a severe head injury.

But Missouri, with Woods passing for more than 450 yards in his two starts, came within four points of upsetting Oklahoma, and impressively downed Kansas State.

Other injuries which had helped deck the Tigers earlier have also abated with the return of tackle James Taylor and running back Earl Gant.

So Saturday, in a crucial Big Eight game for both teams, Missouri travels to Colorado in a game that most certainly will not be the rout that seemed ordained a month ago.

Elsewhere in the fourth week of Big Eight aclion, Oklahoma, the only team unbeaten in league play, is at Kansas State, Kansas goes to Iowa State and Oklahoma State hosts Nebraska.

The sellout crowd in Boulder, Colo., will see two of the finest passers in the country. Colorado's Jeff Knapple has thrown for 934 yards to lead the league. Woods, just coming into form after missing most of the first half of the season, has three splendid receivers in wideouts Joe Stewart and Leo Lewis and tight end Kellen Winslow. Stewart needs just five receptions to become Missouri's career leader. The wiry, acrobatic senior needs 198 yards to overttake Mel Gray's career yardage mark of 1,491.

"With Woods back in action, Missouri is a dangerous and capable football team," he said. "He makes all the difference in the world to them and he is throwing the ball really well right now. he's a winner and their leader, and they really seem confident now with him back in there."

Missouri, 2-5, is trying to salvage its season while the Buffs, 5-1-1, are trying to stay alive in the race for the Orange Bowl. Nobody can predict what effect Tom Perry's injury might have on the morale of the Colorado players. But Pete Woods' effect on the morale of his teammates has already been documented. The Tigers seem prime for one of their patented upsets: Missouri 27, Colorado 20.

Oklahoma and Kansas State have both been jelling. But the Sooners, 6-1 and 3-0, had such a head start on the Wildcats, 1-6, 0-3, that only a miracle could keep Kansas State from losing its 18th straight Big Eight game: Oklahoma 35, Kansas State 21.

Volleyballers in finals of LHS tourney

LILBOURN — The Sikeston girls volleyball squad came one step closer to winning the Lilbourn Invitational Tournament as they defeated the top seeded host team. Their win came in dramatic style as they lost the first game 15-13 and came back to win the next games 16-14 and 15-11.

"It could have gone either way," said a pleased Coach Janie Merrick. Merrick also explained that, "a good, all-around team effort" was the key to the win.

Freshman Rochelle Patterson was another key in the victory as she served seven straight winners in the all-important second game.

The finals of the tourney will see the Aces face North Pemiscot, who advanced with a win over East Prairie. The match will be played at the Lilbourn High School gym at 7:30 p.m.

BOOK REVIEW

J.R.R. Tolkien needs no laudatory introduction.

Readers of the much admired "The Hobbit" and "The Lord Of The Rings" trilogy know what to expect of Tolkien, and he does not fail them in "The Silmarillion."

Tolkien left behind a number of unpublished materials on his death four years ago and five of them, edited by the late author's son, Christopher Tolkien, are included in this large volume: the lengthy book after which the volume is titled and four smaller works called "Ainulindale," "Valaquenta," "Akallabeth," and "Of The Rings Of Power And The Third Age."

All five works are related and deal with the events leading up to the creation of Tolkien's unique world, and some of the events that took place after its creation during the First Age. These events are alluded to in "The Hobbit" and the "Rings" books, which took place in the Third Age, but here are spun out at length.

"The Silmarillion" is the longest and most important of the narratives. Tolkien worked on it for more than 50 years, constantly changing and revising, and after his death it fell to his son to produce "the most coherent and internally self-consistent narrative."

In this he has succeeded very well. It is an epic story and tells of the creation of the three Silmarils — jewels made by the elf Feanor — and the chaos they touched off.

The jewels were coveted by the forces of evil, led by Melkor (later called Morgoth) and equally valued by the forces of good, and the desire to possess them resulted in a seemingly endless series of wars between the opposing sides. What went on during those heroic days makes for interesting reading.

Theatrical shop owner profits from Halloween

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The harvest moon of Halloween turns The Dancer's Shop into a ghoulish meeting place, where Benita Allen can transform the living into the living dead for $3 to $5.

Ms. Allen is manager of the shop, an ordinary looking place which for most of the year deals in leotards, dancing shoes and other show business paraphernalia.

But when the autumn moon is full and Halloween candy appears on supermarket shelves, Ms. Allen starts to work her bewitchery.

"It all began about three years ago, when we started carrying theatrical makeup," she said.

"We didn't realize how much makeup sold at Halloween. We were amazed. Last year it was so big that we realized how effective it was, really, so we decided this year to open a clinic," she said.

The "clinic" is a series of little seminars each night this week in which Ms. Allen and her sister, Jeanie Wilson, provide free instruction on an assortment of bizarre transformations.

The werewolf was Monday's exercise. It required about $3 worth of crepe hair, spirit gum and black makeup. Blond werewolves required applications of dark hair spray to keep from blowing their cover.

On Tuesday the sisters planned to produce dogs and ghosts. On Wednesday they were to teach youngsters how to use liquid latex to add about 70 years to their age. "Their faces will actually be wrinkled," Ms. Allen explained. "This one costs a little more — about $5."

Thursday's schedule gives the changelings a choice: a witch, a clown or a Martian. And finally on Friday, the ever-popular Dracula lives again ... and again and again.

All of the necessary materials are for sale at the shop, and there's no denying that the clinics will help move the merchandise. But there's clearly more to the service than profit, since the shop also sells a pullover gorilla mask that produces roughly the same effect as the werewolf makeup — for $18.

"I hope the idea catches on," said Ms. Allen. "The masks are really too bulky and the kids can't see out of them very well."

What's the law?

BY JACK STRAUSS, LL.B.

While the early bird catches the worm, a whirly-bird caught Selma red-handed. Two unswerving narcotics agents, suspiscious that Selma was growing marijuana commandeered a helicopter to fly them over her property. And, while hovering about 20 to 25 feet above ground, they spotted her bumper crop of "grass" and, consequently, bumped indignant Selma right into court. She was charged with unlawfully cultivating a small field of marijuana.

"What's this country coming to," she protested to a judge. "I can't be convicted on evidence observed from a helicopter. Flying over my property without my permission was an unlawful search without a warrant."

"We didn't need any old warrant," responded the narcotics agents. "We neigher entered her property nor did we search it. All we did was fly over it."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold that "farmer" Selma was a victim of an unlawful search?

This is how the judge ruled: YES! The judge held that when a helicopter is used to fly over a person's property for the specific purpose of uncovering illegal operations below, such helicopter activity constitues an unlawful search without a warrant.

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — A plan for a monument to the Beatles, who put this grimy port city on the map in the 1960s and dominated pop music for more than a decade, has met rebuff in their home town.

The City Council's General Services Committee voted 11-9 Wednesday night against erecting a monument to the four Liverpool natives.

"In my opinion they're not worthy of a place in our history," said city councillor Roy Stoddard, 59, in explaining his negative vote.

"They couldn't sing for toffee," said another city father, Tony McVeigh, who also cast a nay vote. "They ended up taking drugs and bringing discredit to the city."

The issue now goes to the full council, which numbers 99 including the lord mayor.

"How narrow-minded, how short-sighted, and how typically out of touch with what people think and feel," the Liverpool Echo commented in an editorial Thursday.

The newspaper rallied to the defense of the since-disbanded pop group "whose special talent is now indelibly written in the history of popular music" and accused the committee members of sitting in a "remote ivory tower."

"The councillors don't seem to realize just what a world phenomenon the Beatles are," commented Alan Williams, the group's first manager in Liverpool.

"There should be a complete museum and tourist industry in Liverpool, let alone a single monument.

"They'll be recognized as the greatest composers of this century. Many famous composers in history have been drug addicts, and even homosexuals, but that doesn't stop them from being honored as great artists."

John Chambers, 29, an unemployed ship's carpenter, is spearheading the plan to put up the monument to the four Beatles — John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr.

The head of an unofficial group of diehard Beatles fans, Chambers launched an appeal for $31,500 and is organizing a series of rock concerts to help raise the money. An anonymous London businessman has offered to start a fund with $875.

The plan was to erect a statue in a downtown shopping center a few hundred yards from the site of the Cavern Club, where the Beatles got their start in the early 1960s.

"It's a disgrace that there's virtually nothing in the city for the tourists coming here to see the places like the Cavern and Penny Lane," Chambers said.

Accountability project overlaps

WASHINGTON (AP) — At $7.50 a copy, it isn't going to be a best seller. Free, it wouldn't be a best seller.

That's because the Republican National Committee's promise-by-promise recital of what President Carter has and hasn't done is about as dramatic as a telephone directory.

Nonetheless, the GOP "presidential accountability project" has its moments. It lists campaign promises kept, broken and in five other categories. Sometimes they overlap.

Take the Republican assessment of Carter's promise to pursue budget and money supply policies so as to perk up the economy, "with some deficits if necessary, to reduce unemployment more rapidly."

According to the GOP scorekeeping system, this composite campaign pledge has been broken, kept and not kept, depending on which phase is under appraisal.

The GOP appraisal notes that Carter began by adding $19.4 billion to the projected deficit, but that cancellation of his proposed $50 tax rebate reduced that sum, and a lower-than-expected rate of government spending will reduce it still more.

The Republicans have cited some clear reversals of Carter's campaign pledges, notably his statements that he would not relinquish U.S. control of the Panama Canal, and that he favored deregulating the price of newly discovered natural gas.

They also contend that the tax provisions of his energy program break his promise not to increase taxes on lower- and middle-income Americans.

All of this goes on for 205 pages in a blue-bound Republican sequel to the list of Carter campaign promises prepared by the White House.

According to the Republicans, that list and others add up to 612 Carter campaign promises. By Republican accounting, he's kept 107 of them and broken 77. The rest are pending or impossible to classify at this point.

It seems a little early for a box score on an administration that has not yet presented such major elements of the Carter program as tax reform and national health insurance.

But the Republicans aren't resting on their dossier. They plan to keep it current, and probably will issue a new edition early in the 1978 congressional campaign year.

Copies of the GOP appraisal, called "Promises, Promises," have gone out to Republican members of Congress, GOP governors and members of the national committee. The party is advertising the book to its workers and donors at $7.50 a copy.

The kind of detailed scorekeeping the Republicans are attempting now is customarily reserved for presidential campaign years. But Michael E. Baroody, director of research for the Republican National Committee, said Carter will be an issue in 1978.

And by 1980, he said, the Republicans will have an exhaustive accounting of Carter's performance in office, ready for their candidates to use. "This is the beginning of that effort," he said.

The White House is not impressed.

David Rubenstein, who edited the compilation of Carter campaign pledges, said he hadn't seen the Republican catalogue.

"We haven't bothered to get a copy," he said. Nor is the White House trying to keep score against the promises list.

"It wasn't intended to be a checklist," Rubenstein said. He also said Carter never got around to reading the compilation.

Instead, when decision papers are prepared for the President, White House staff members dig out copies of Carter campaign speeches to provide a detailed account of his campaign pronouncements on the issue at hand.

Discontinued customers not to receive

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri Utilities Co. has won state approval to eliminate a requirement that it send required refunds to persons who have already discontinued their service.

The Missouri Public Service Commission agreed to modify its order for distribution of nearly $580,000 in refunds after the utility said it would cost $75,000 for it to comply with the provisions involving alreadydisconnected customers. The company said that additional administrative cost would reduce the amount of money available for refunds to all customers.

The company was originally ordered to send refunds due any former customer to that customer's last known address. The new provision requires the utility to advertise that the refunds are available, but the former customer would have to file a claim for the refund by Dec. 1.

The refunds result from a reduction in the price Missouri Utilities was charged for natural gas by its suppliers between 1970 and 1972 and 1975 and 1977. The reduction was ordered by the Federal Power Commission after an investigation into the wholesale price charged by the suppliers.

Current customers in the company's central Missouri and southeast Missouri service areas will receive their refunds as credits on their bills through December.

More 'readable' home insurance promised

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The director of the state Department of Consumer Affairs says thousands of homeowners across Missouri will soon be able to get more "readable" homeowners insurance policies.

Consumer affairs chief James Sullivan said Thursday a more readable policy had been needed so homeowners would be able to better "understand the benefits and limitations of their insurance protection."

The new homeowners' policy was filed by the Insurance Services Office of Missouri, a private group representing major insurance companies. There are about 200 member and subscriber companies in the organization, he said.

The policy would take effect Nov. 1 and already about 50 companies have completed the procedures necessary to use the policy, Sullivan explained.

Companies must ask to use the new policy, Sullivan noted. A total of about 300 companies write homeowners insurance in Missouri, he said.

The new policy would be available to about 40 per cent of the homeowners in the state, officials said.

A survey by the Insurance Division, in conjunction with a legislative committee, showed 80 per cent of the homeowners insurance policyholders understood "very little" or only "some" of the language in their homeowners policies, Sullivan added.

Dear Editor:

I commend the Daily Standard's editorial in Tuesday's edition which related to the petition of Mrs. O'Hair and her efforts to persuade the Federal Communications Commission to ban the broadcasting of religious programs. I believe Mrs. O'Hair has done enough harm through her successful efforts a few years ago which resulted in banning any Bible reading in the public schools. I hope enough people will write to the Federal Communications Commission of 1919 M. Street, Washington D.C. protesting the approval of the proposed regulation which would deny the privilege of broadcasting facilities from permitting religious broadcasts.

I think there may be much good from such broadcasts and, in my opinion, there 'sure as hell' a need to improve television programs.

I'M writing my letter to the commission, will you do likewise?

Sincerely,
C.D. Wright

APPLE APPEAL

"Maybe it's because apples ripen at Halloween time, and were sacred to the early Druids," says Hallmark researcher Sally Hopkins. "They also figured in the Roman equivalent of Halloween, a festival honoring Pomona, the goddess of fruits."

The Halloween game of bobbing for apples or biting at apples suspended by a string originated generations ago in Ireland, Scotland and parts of England, according to Miss Hopkins. Sometimes a riskier variation was played by fixing an apple and a lighted candle at opposite ends of a suspended stick.

Missouri's restrictive blue law loss in sales tax and revenues

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Missouri merchants in this border city have seen their customers drive across the state line in droves for 15 years of Sundays to go shopping in Kansas.

Officials say this has been costing Kansas City, Mo., more than $2 million a year in sales tax and other tax revenues. Neighboring Independence estimates it loses about $500,000 a year.

And all because of Missouri's blue law or legal restriction on Sunday sales, which Kansas kicked over in 1962.

For years, efforts have been made to get Missouri in on some of the Sunday action, but to no avail.

Now this could change. On Nov. 9, the voters of Clay, Jackson and Platte counties in Missouri will be able to vote to legalize sales of most merchandise on Sundays.

In 22 states, the blue law prohibits the sale of non-essential goods on Sundays. Only food and certain other goods designated necessities in the statutes can be sold, which forces most large department stores and speciality shops to close their doors on the last day of the weekend.

Designating certain items as necessities is dangerous business, the law's detractors say. Missouri's blue law, for example, allows the sale of guns and ammunition on Sundays but prohibits the sale of baby bottles, hoses and light bulbs.

Both states had similar blue laws until the early 1960s when the supreme courts of the two states ruled the laws void. Missouri responded by adopting a form of the blue law that complied with the supreme court ruling. But Kansas rejected repeated attempts in its legislature to re-enact any form of the law which it passed in 1861.

Before its ban on Sunday sales was ruled unconstitutional, Missouri had the law on its books for 138 years.

Last year, after repeated attempts by Kansas City-area legislators to repeal the law, the Missouri Legislature passed a bill allowing only the three counties in metropolitan Kansas City to vote on the proposal.

Growth of incorporated suburbs in both Missouri and Kansas has long been a sore point with Kansas City, Mo., officials. Right-to-work laws and legal Sunday sales in Kansas are said to have done much to entice shops and industry to the Sunflower State.

Most of the states bordering Missouri—including Arkansas, Illinois, Iowa and Kansas—allow Sunday sales, which makes enforcing the law particularly unpopular near Missouri borders.

At the other side of the state in St. Louis, the legal sale of merchandise on Sunday in western Illinois communities has created less of a stir. Illinois and Missouri are separated by the Mississippi River and access to Illinois stores is slightly more troublesome than access to Kansas stores at the other side of the state.

Until recently, St. Louis' major department stores and the strong retail clerks union had resisted attempts to allow Sunday sales. But the department stores agreed in 1975 not to fight repeal of the blue law, even though they did not agree to support Sunday sales.

State legislators from the St. Louis area have traditionally been reluctant to throw their support behind repeal of the blue law, and fought attempts to include the St. Louis area counties in the recently-passed measure.

Lobby groups traditionally favoring the ban on Sunday sales have included automobile dealers, small retailers, the retail clerks union and Christian organizations. Their reasons vary from not wanting to be forced to work on a Sunday to preserving a day of rest.

State Rep. Phillip Scaglia, DKansas City, has led a crusade against the blue law in Missouri since he began his first term in the House 12 years ago. Until last year, his efforts were unsuccessful; it was 1976 before his blue law repeal bills even made it to the floor of the House for debate.

During 1977, he went on the offensive with a push for strict enforcement of the law. He and his workers purchased goods in several Missouri counties on Sundays and took the evidence to local prosecuting attorneys demanding that charges be filed against the stores selling the goods.

The battle plan was intended to create a political climate where Missourians would ask their legislators to repeal the law. The plan worked to the extent that the Missouri General Assembly acquiesced to a repeal referendum for the Kansas City area counties only.

Many blue law advocates in the Bible Belt believe allowing Sunday sales will result in partial abandonment of the family unit's time together on Sundays.

And they'll be buying and paying sales tax in Kansas City and Missouri rather than Kansas, he added.

Teen life follows art

'American Graffiti' lives in Medford

By Murray Olderman

MEDFORD, Ore. — (NEA) — Saturday night in this southern Oregon lumber center should convince anyone that the whole world is aged 15 to 25.

Or at least that's the way it looks on Central Avenue once dusk settles over the Rogue River country and the neon lights go on to announce beauty shops, vacuum cleaners, hardware and pizza.

By 8 p.m., the traffic is bumper to bumper where Main crosses Central. It has been going on like this for five years, the guy at the Shell Station tells me. And maybe you can blame George Lucas and the film "American Graffiti" — for that signalled the revival of cruising in Medford and Modesto and Walla Walla and maybe 1,000 other small cities in America.

The kids really get brazen, too. Even a middle-aged intruder in nondescript slacks and sneakers is flattered when the blonde in the Camaro shouts as she zips by, "Hey, you're good looking."

In the corner window of Monte's Shoe Store, facing the intersection of Central and Main, Jerry Allen, a local disk jockey for station KYCZ is winding down toward the final hours of a muscular dystrophy marathon broadcast. He's gone without sleep for four straight days, and a young brunette standing behind him massages his shoulders to ease the fatigue.

Half a block down the street, at the Craterion Theater, "Star Wars" is the feature attraction and, miracle of miracles, the line doesn't even extend around the corner. For city folks, it's a perfect time to catch Lucas' latest cinema opus. And, while standing in the modest line for the 9 o'clock show, still watch the motorized parade down Central Avenue.

There's a steady var-r-r-oom of four-wheel drive pickups, jeeps, Camaros, Mustangs, Darts and even one big Mack truck — without the van. They're piloted by boys and girls in flowing hair (both boys and girls). There's no mingling. Boys are with boys as passengers; girls are with girls.

This makes us question Patty and Joannie, who are standing behind us in line, about the phenomenon of unisex. Patty and Joannie are high school freshmen (freshpersons?). Patty confesses that she has seen the movie four times so far because "it's neat."

There's a steady var-r-room of four-wheel pickups, jeeps, Camaros, Mustangs, Darts and even one big Mack truck — without the van. They're piloted by boys and girls in flowing hair. There's no mingling. Boys are with boys as passengers; girls are with girls.

How come they don't have dates? Where are the guys?

In front of us are a couple of husky, handsome high school seniors who are also standing in line for the show. Why aren't they cruising?

"Plenty of time for that," scoffs Hank. "It doesn't really get heavy till after the movie lets out. We don't start till midnight."

Thirteen miles down the road from Medford is picturesque Ashland, where a Shakespeare festival reigns all summer and where there isn't a single motel room available.

Patty and Joannie know all about it, but they've never been. "That's for tourists," says Patty. "By the way, what are you guys doing here?"

No motel reservation, it is explained. And no ticket to the Shakespeare Theater. So we had to track all the way to the big city of Medford (population, 28,000) to bunk down at the Red Lion Motel, which had a sunken tub in the room at the princely price of 30 bucks a night and a terrific buffet in the restaurant for dinner — roast beef, fried chicken, spare ribs, with salad bar and dessert, all you can eat, for $5.75 a head.

It's only a short walk to all the action at the intersection of Central and Main. There's only one disconcerting note on this Saturday night in Oregon.

While all the young people are chasing frenetically up and down the boulevards, across the street from where Jerry Allen is broadcasting in the shoe store, in the United Bank building, on the second floor, there's a light on in the office.

A young guy in his 20s, sleeves rolled up, is at a desk. You can see him clearly through the open window. His head doesn't raise once as the little world around him cruises by in that strange, aimless pattern of kids passing time.

The young guy is actually working.

David Wilkerson to speak in Cape

CAPE GIRARDEAU— The author of "The Cross and the Switchblade", the Rev. David Wilkerson, will speak at the Arena Building Nov. 7 at 7:30 p.m.

The Rev. Mr. Wilkerson's first book, the best-seller book was a personal account of his first efforts to reach and rehabilitate street gang members during the era of the gang wars of the late 1950s and early 1960s. The book, first published in 1962, is in its 28th printing, has been translated into 42 languages, and has passed the 16-million mark in sales. It also was made into a feature-length movie in 1970, with Pat Boone playing the part of David Wilkerson.

The Rev. Mr. Wilkerson's book details the formation of the organization called Teen Challenge which in the past decade has become one of the most successful in the world for the rehabilitation of drug addicts. Teen Challenge now has facilities in over 50 cities in the United States (including Mid-America Teen Challenge Training Center here) and a documented cure rate of 74 per cent.

notorious Mau Maus. Cruz was known as one of the most feared and hated street fighters in New York. When the Rev. Mr. Wilkerson first approached Cruz, he spit on him, slapped him across the face and told him to "go to hell." Cruz later became a Wilkerson convert and one of his most trusted assistants.

The Rev. Mr. Wilkerson now spends the majority of his time speaking to teen-agers about drugs, sex, alcohol, rebellion and other subjects of current interest. He also has written several more books.

U.S. church leaders condemn restrictions in South Africa

NEW YORK (AP) — American church leaders this week widely condemned the new restrictions imposed on blacks and their white sympathizers in South Africa and said it would heighten resentments, threatening worsened conflict.

"My worst fears are being fulfilled," said the Rev. Dr. Robert J. Marshall, president of the Luthern Church in America, noting that he recently visited in South Africa, and saw potentialities then for spreading "police state" rule.

It was bound to happen unless blacks were given greater freedom and a part in government, he said, and it now is occurring with the new "horribly confining restraints."

The trend "could confront the world with a crisis like that of 40 years ago in Europe" under the oppression of Nazism, he added.

He and other church leaders voiced support for President Carter's criticism of the new oppressive acts, and urged backing for U.S. steps to try to get the decrees reversed.

The Rev. Avery D. Post, president of the United Church of Christ, called for economic sanctions, and noted that his church has urged withdrawal of U.S. businesses investments from South Africa.

He said that "for the sake of the God of justice ... the United States must not remain quiescent in the face of the ruthless denials of justice" applied to blacks and white leaders working for racial justice.

Baptists delay action on grant program

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — Delegates to the Missouri Baptist Convention meeting in Springfield Tuesday deferred until next year a proposal to withdraw from a state grants program because of Missouri requirements banning religious discrimination.

The proposal would have resulted in Baptist affiliated colleges ending participation in the Missouri Public Assistance Grants Program by 1981.

By a 589-379 standing vote, the delegates adopted a measure proposed by the Rev. F.R. Cole of Raytown, calling for further study of "the unanswered questions concerning the broad implications of governmental assistance or subsidization of Missouri Baptist agencies, institutions, churches and individuals.

He succeeds Milton Morales of Independence.

Swadley has spent 23 years as a minister including the past seven and a half in Springfield. He attended Southwest Baptist College in Bolivar and was graduated from Southwest Missouri State University and Midwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Kansas City.

The committee's concern centered on the Missouri Student Grant Program, which requires non-discrimination in hiring.

Revival crusade to open tonight

Evangelists Donald and Vailie Honeycutt will conduct a series of revival services opening tonight and continuing indefinitely at a building located at 317 S. Main St. which formerly housed a western store, the Rev. Mr. Honeycutt announced this week.

The services will begin at 7:30 each evening, and will feature country gospel music by both the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Honeycutt. The Rev. Mr. Honeycutt plays the harmonica and guitar at the same time as well as sings, and has written numerous gospel songs.

A native of Dunn, N.C., the Rev. Mr. Honeycutt has been a Christian only eight years, and admits to having a wild and rocky past prior to his conversion after coming to what he terms "the end of my road." Feeling called into the ministry by the Lord shortly after his conversion, he joined his wife who has been an ordained minister for 20 years.

The Honeycutts adhere to a deeper life ministry and say they believe they were led by God to come to Sikeston and conduct revival services through their friendship and association with Mr. and Mrs. James W. Lee, 526 Malcolm St., whom they have known for some time.

The composer of a variety of songs, the Rev. Mr. Honeycutt has produced an album with the help of the Christian Toubadours and Nashville Sound.

No. 23. Jesus Charges Peter

When Jesus came to Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples what the people there had said about his identity. They replied that some called him Elijah, some John the Baptist, some Jeremiah, and others called him one of the other prophets.

"He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." (Matthew 16:15-16)

"And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter; and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven." Rise in worker productivity found

WASHINGTON (AP) — The productivity of American workers rose at an annual rate of 4.9 per cent in the third quarter, following a 1.1 per cent decline in the second three months of the year, the Labor Department reported.

Productivity is the amount of output per hour worked and is an important measure of efficiency in the economy.

Rising productivity leads to higher real wages and lessened inflation because more output comes from the same amount of time worked.

The government said the productivity growth in the third quarter reflected a 4 per cent increase in output and an eighttenths per cent decline in hours worked.

Although the third-quarter rate of output was less than half the 8.5 per cent rate in the second quarter, it was accomplished with little increase in hiring coupled with a slight decline in hours worked, resulting in the growth in the productivity.

Workers gained significantly in buying power in the third quarter, the government said, as "real" hourly compensation in the private economy rose 3 per cent. This "real" hourly compensation, which is hourly pay adjusted for inflation, declined 2.2 per cent in the second three months of the year.

Compensation per hour rose at an 8.4 per cent annual rate in the third quarter, compared with a 6.3 per cent increase in the pcevious quarter.

The productivity gains, however, lessened the impact of rising wages on unit labor costs, which rose at a 3.3 per cent annual rate in the JulySeptember period. It was the smallest such increase since the third quarter of 1975.

Though an erupting volcano brings to mind pictures of flowing rivers of boiling lava, not all active volcanoes emit lava. Mount Taal in the Philippines, with a history of death and destruction, has spewed forth noxious gases, steaming mud and ash and white-hot rocks — but never lava.

Film world not interesting

CAIRO (AP) — Michael York, the country bumpkin fencing ace in "Three Musketeers" and the peripatetic legionnaire in "The Last Remake of Beau Geste," says he's rediscovering television.

"The film world is not in a really interesting state. The big studios are not doing the best work. Some of the best films are coming from a young group of (director Francis Ford) Coppola disciples," said York, who was in Cairo recently for an international film festival.

York, a boyish-looking, tan, blond 35, said he had just turned down a terrorist role in an upcoming movie.

"Dangerous," the British actor said over croissants and tea as he watched a string of barges glide up the Nile.

"It's too dangerous. The terrorist was the hero, and I felt that was reprehensible.

"It's a very dangerous point. I think that one's work, if it's going to be good, has to be embelished by a kind of truth and realism that only comes from being totally in accord with it. There's something about urban guerrillas that sticks in my gut."

York's next project is a magic act in an upcoming CBS TV program called "Secular Circus." He'll follow that with a radio play called "The Dark Tower" with the All-Media Dramatic Workshop in Chicago.

He's never done radio drama before. "That's why I wanted to do it, especially this play which was written for radio.

"The one thing I hate is being restricted, which is something that happens in our business. People push you into a pigeonhole."

York is doing his best not to be pigeonholed. After a series of big-name, big-money movies — "Cabaret" with Liza Minnelli, "Murder on the Orient Express" with Albert Finney and Lauren Bacall — he is turning back to the small screen.

"I've suddenly rediscovered television. I've done several things for the BBC recently, the kind of things you can't do in film," York said.

Despite all his projects in Britain, York last year joined the growing number of English actors who have opted to live abroad to escape the exorbitant income tax at home. York said taxes took 94 per cent of his income during his last year in Britain.

York and his wife, Pat, a freelance photographer who was sent to photograph the actor in 1967 and married him in 1968, now live in Monaco.

By Martha Angle and Robert Walters

WASHINGTON – (NEA) – After years of embarrassing disclosures about illegal payments of millions of dollars by American corporations to politicians and government officials in other nations, Congress is about to pass a law prohibiting the practice in the future.

The legislation offered to the Senate, however, contains a little-noticed loophole that not only will allow international bribery to continue but will endow the practice with the federal government's seal of approval.

Because many of the nation's largest companies have falsified their financial records to conceal such corruption in the past, the bill establishes stringent new accounting and reporting requirements for publicly-owned corporations under the jurisdiction of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

But the measure also includes a crucial exemption that waives the reporting requirements for "any person acting in cooperation with, and at the specific, written directive of the head of any federal agency or department responsible for matters concerning the national security of the United States."

In plain language, that provision exempts international political bribes undertaken at the request or with the cooperation of the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) or other intelligence organizations within the government.

The special waiver was inserted in the bill by Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., when the Senate Banking Committee was drafting the legislation earlier this year. The bill was routinely approved by the full Senate last spring.

While tracking down the history of the obscure provision, Fielding M. McGehee III, an official of a public interest group called the Military Audit Project, discovered that there was no testimony during the public hearings on its effects or genesis, no debate by the committee, no recorded vote and no discussion on the Senate floor.

The House version of the bill, drafted by a subcommittee headed by Rep. Bob Eckhardt, D-Tex., recently was approved by the House Commerce Committee and now awaits action by the full House.

Eckhardt's bill contains no exemption for intelligence-related bribery. "We never focused on that, it just never came up," says an aide to the congressman. But other sources say Eckhardt specifically parried the intelligence community's efforts to write the provision into the bill.

The Senate version is objectionable for several reasons, not the least of which is its effect of placing the federal government in the position of a parent who forbids a child from doing something because it's wrong, but insists that it's perfectly appropriate for mother or father to do it.

The exemption also leaves executives and employees of American corporations stationed abroad under a continuing cloud – both as CIA operatives and as paymasters of illegal funds.

There have, in fact, been numerous reports in recent years that the CIA was aware of, encouraged and possibly even provided the funds for corporate bribery in the past.

Questions have been raised by about $7 million paid by the Lockheed Aircraft Corp. to an intermediary in Japan; about commissions paid by the Boeing Co. to its "agents" in Iran, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia; and about almost $8.3 million transferred overseas by Deak & Co., a New York-based firm that deals in international currency transactions.

One knowledgeable official on Capitol Hill suggests that "some people in the Senate don't want to totally hamstring the CIA, if that indeed is their modus operandi."

If the CIA must resort to bribery and must rely on corporate "cutouts" to obscure the source of the money, let there be no sanctimonious self-congratulation from Washington's politicians if the final version of the "reform" legislation contains a mult-million-dollar loophole.

State farm organizations support strengthing laws

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — The state's major farm organizations support strengthening state laws to prevent a recurrence of problems like those resulting from the collapse of the Progressive Farmers Association, a top official of the Missouri Farmers Association said today.

Alfred Hoffman, vice president and general counsel for MFA, said his organization, Farmland Industries and the Missouri Farm Bureau had conferred with Secretary of State James Kirkpatrick's office on strengthening the laws to prevent a recurrence of problems like those associated with the collapse of the PFA.

PFA went bankrupt several months ago leaving several thousand Missourians with million of dollars in virtually worthless securities.

The House Civil and Criminal Justice Committee is holding a series of hearings to try to update state laws to prevent another PFA affair.

Kirkpatrick has recommended a series of revisions to help prevent another PFA.

Hoffman said the recomendations had been worked out by atttorneys for the three major farm organizations and Kirkpatrick's office.

Among those suggestions was one which would require securities salesmen to supply the secretary of state with adequate information on their activities, Hoffman said.

Such information would enable the secretary of state to determine if the salesmen were actually representing a true farm cooperative, he said.

In addition, he said Kirkpatrick would have the authority to stop the sale of securities in farm cooperatives if he determined the organizations were not actually true cooperatives.

Kirkpatrick and Attorney General John Ashcroft had testified at the committee's hearing Wednesday, with both officials calling for stronger laws.

1. In Memoriam

In Memory of Dennis C. Evans who passed away this day - Oct. 30, 1974.
Three years ago since that sad day,
Death claimed you darling and took you away,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
Little do they realize the hurt our hearts conceals.
More and more we miss you,
With the passing of each day,
Home is oh, so empty, since you have gone away.
We think of you in silence, few ever see us weep,
But many a tear we shed while others lay asleep
Never shall you be forgotten,
Never from our memory fade,
Loving thoughts will always linger,
Round the grave where you were laid.

A Third Of The Homes We Foam Already Have Fiberglass Insulation

So why add foam? Very simply because foam insulates at least three times better than fiberglass, and can greatly reduce heat loss...even in a previously insulated home. The fluidity of foam also serves to fill all the voids around plumbing, and behind electrical fixtures. It really seals out unwanted outdoor temperatures, winter and summer, and gives you the most comfort for the least fuel cost. Foam can be applied to any structure at any time. So call now for a free estimate and inspection.

No fault insurance succeeds in repaying accident victims

EDITOR'S NOTE: Congress is considering a bill to require every state to implement nofault auto insurance meeting minimum federal standards. Sixteen states already have some sort of no-fault program. But no-fault is NOT without faults. Here, in the first of a two-part series on auto insurance, is a look at how it's working.

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

No-fault auto insurance, once promoted as a means of cutting costs for consumers, has failed to stem the tide of soaring premiums, but authorities say it has succeeded in its main goal of getting benefits into the hands of accident victims more quickly.

"We consider it a smashing success," said William Sheppard, Pennsylvania insurance commissioner, when asked about his state's no-fault program which took effect July 19, 1975.

"It has accomplished everything we said it would accomplish," said Jack Davies, a Minnesota state senator who sponsored a no-fault plan that began Jan. 1, 1975.

"No-fault is working well," said Kentucky Insurance Commissioner Harold McGuffey. "It's doing the job it's supposed to do — paying more people more money and arranging quick settlements. We have had practically no complaints."

At the same time, however, the drive for no-fault at the state level has stalled. Several states which passed no-fault laws early in the 1970s have been forced to make major changes.

President Carter has endorsed the concept of a federal no-fault bill, but the measures have not gotten beyond the hearing stage.

Premiums, meanwhile, are going up. And up. They increased almost 50 per cent from August 1975 to August 1977.

If no-fault is working so well, why haven't more states passed no-fault laws? What went wrong with the existing ones? Why the delay in passing a federal law? And why are prices rising?

The concept behind no-fault is simple: each party in an accident is compensated, for medical expenses at least, by his own insurance company. An individual's right to sue for further damages is limited. Expensive court cases and lengthy delays are eliminated.

Massachusetts became the first state in the nation to enact a no-fault law. The plan took effect Jan. 1, 1971. Since then, 15 other states have passed nofault laws. They are: Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Pennsylvania and Utah. The most recent law — North Dakota's — took effect on Jan. 1, 1976.

(Eight other states passed laws that were described as nofault, but they place no limitation on the right of an accident victim to sue and cannot really be counted as part of the nofault system.)

One reason for the problems with no-fault is a lack of understanding about what it can and cannot do.

No-fault supporters themselves may be partly to blame for the confusion. Ron Arnold of State Farm Insurance Cos., the nation's biggest auto insurer, said that politicians, eager to get support for the concept, appealed to people's pocketbooks. They promised — mistakenly — that no-fault would lower premiums and, in some cases, ordered rate decreases when no-fault went into effect.

Some state officials concede privately that the money-saving claims were a come-on and not realistic. They say now that the advantages of no-fault are not monetary.

There are several reasons for the lack of cost saving. No-fault generally applies only to bodily injury. Property damage stays under the old system — the insurance company of the motorist at fault has to pay. And property damage, according to State Farm, accounts for 60 cents of every dollar you pay in premiums on a nationwide basis.

James Hunt, director of the State Rating Bureau in Massachusetts, said bodily injury rates dropped 45 per cent from 1970 to 1976. Without no-fault, he said, they would have increased 63 per cent.

"The real proof of our success with no-fault is the steady reduction in bodily injury insurance rates," said Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, who, as a legislator, was a major sponsor of the state's no-fault law. "Unfortunately, the rate reductions for bodily injury have been counter-balanced by rates for other coverages which have gone up about as fast as bodily injury rates have come down."

Other officials said the rate increases would have been even worse without no-fault. Dr. James C. Nicholas, staff director of an ad hoc Automobile Insurance Commission in Florida, said that the cost of commercial vehicle insurance — which remained under the conventional system — has risen 130 per cent since 1971. Auto insurance, under no-fault, has risen 100 per cent in the same period.

State Farm said a survey showed that the average increase in automobile insurance rates in the 16 no-fault states from Dec. 31, 1970 through the end oflast year was 24.6 per cent, compared to a nationwide average boost of 27.7 per cent.

Authorities also say that while no-fault has eliminated some of the legal costs surrounding accidents, the savings has been offset by the fact that more people are getting benefits since they are automatically paid by their own companies.

A Department of Transportation study showed that in Connecticut, an estimated 25 per cent more accident victims recover economic losses under no-fault than under the traditional system.

"With this no-fault system, people no longer have to worry about beggaring themselves to pay for their injuries," said Milton Friedman, counsel to the New York State Insurance Department. "And people in single-car accidents — who never got anything under the old law — are also being compensated."

Gene Glascock, supervising analyst for the Colorado Insurance Division, said no-fault "has reallocated funds, putting the funds in the hands of the injured rather than in the hands of the attorneys handling court cases. It hasn't really altered the cost to the insuring company."

One problem with existing nofault programs, say officials, is that it is still too easy to sue. The laws generally allow a person to go to court after medical expenses reach a certain threshold. In nine states, the threshold is $750 or less. In New Jersey, it is only $200.

"I would guess that with continued inflation we would have to look at ... the threshold," said a spokesman for the Insurance Department in North Dakota, where a victim with medical expenses exceeding $1,000 is allowed to sue. "With the increased cost of medical services ... the $1,000 figure might not be realistic any more," he added.

State Insurance Commissioner Dick Rottman of Nevada, which has a $750 threshold, said: "It doesn't seem to be much of a problem for a person to sue, even if injured only slightly."

To correct the problem, authorities are considering raising the dollar threshold or eliminating it completely as New York and Florida have done recently and replacing it with a requirement that generally prohibits suits unless the accident results in death or serious injury.

(Michigan is the only other state without a dollar threshold; it is one of only three states — New Jersey and Pennsylvania are the others — which puts no ceiling on the amount of medical expenses that can be collected. Legislation under consideration in Pennsylvania would limit basic medical coverage to $100,000, with companies required to offer a maximum of $250,000 to customers who wanted the extra protection. The proposed federal legislation would allow states to put a limit of $250,000 on benefits for medical expenses and would permit individual suits only in case of death or serious injury.)

Fault or no-fault, there may be some relief from rising costs. The frequency of claims — a key factor in determining rates — has declined, although no one is sure why.

Auto insurance companies, many of which lost money during several periods in 1976, have reported enormous profits. They have not filed for rate reductions, but say the increased earnings may help offset future increases.

"We don't anticipate nearly the rapid rise in rates" of the past two or three years, said a spokesman for State Farm. He said State Farm increases on a nationwide average have been ranging from 12 to 15 per cent in recent years; this year, he said, the average increase will be 6 to 7 per cent.

The Consumer Price Index shows that auto insurance prices went up 12.5 per cent from August 1976 to August 1977. That compares with an increase of 31.2 per cent in the preceding year.
